BOWERS SCORES RULE OF "PRIVILEGE AND PILLAGE" IN SPEECH

New Yorker Sounds Ringing Denunciation Of Party In Power Calling His Victims By Name; Belligerent Oratory Stirs Houston Convention

By GEORGE R. HOLMES

SAM HOUSTON HALL, HOUSTON, Tex., June 27.—A ringing call to arms for the enlistment of all Democrats in a great battle to "throw the rascals out" was sounded here today by Claude G. Bowers in his keynote speech of the Democratic national convention last night. The speech was postponed until last night to insure a greater radio audience. It was accompanied by a slashing, stinging, savage attack on the Harding-Coolidge Republican administration of the last eight years—an indictment that for sheer severity of tone and brilliancy of expression probably has had few equals in the history of American political conventions. "Plunderers," "pillagers," "corruptionists," "criminals," "autocrats," "bureaucrats," "thieves," and "rascals"—these were but a few of the terms used by the New York editor in describing the kind of governmental leadership the nation has had under two Republican administrations. He lashed them by innuendo and he scourged them by name.

His first sentence was a clarion challenge: "The American democracy has mobilized today to wage a war of extermination against privilege and pillage." His last sentence was an appeal for Democratic unity in the great undertaking: "The predatory forces before us seek a triumph for the sake of sacking. Their shock troops are the black horse cavalry whose hoofbeats have made hideous music on Pennsylvania Avenue for the last eight years. In the presence of such a foe the who dares is a dastard and he who doubts is damned." In this connection we close debate and grasp the sword. The time has come. The battle hour has struck. Then to your tents, O Israel!"

PLATFORM WORKERS ATTEMPT TO PACIFY PROHIBITION FIGHT

Drys Wrangle Over Plank; Ritchie Will Fight.

By KENNETH CLARK
N. S. Staff Correspondent
HOUSTON, Tex., June 27.—The Democratic resolutions committee worked under forced draft today to get the 1928 platform into shape for the convention by tomorrow. Already a day has been lost because Clem L. Shaver snapped off the first session without waiting for the appointing of committees. The platform committee, ratified by the convention at the night session, devoted today to hearing proponents of various planks. The final platform draft is expected to be approved at an executive session which probably will run through the night.

The delay gave harmony seekers an additional opportunity to pacify the differences between the militant wets and drys over the prohibition plank. The soothing efforts were carried into conference that lasted until dawn streaked over the scorched city. The dry leaders also met separately. There was considerable wrangling among the drys over the exact language of the plank. Senator Glass of Virginia and ex-Secretary of Navy Daniels of North Carolina tried to get their followers to unite behind a plank that would command undivided support.

It seemed certain today that unless the drys are accorded a plank pledging strict enforcement of the eighteenth amendment and all laws enacted pursuant thereto, the convention itself will have to dispose of the prohibition row. That might touch off fireworks reminiscent of Madison Square Garden. The Smith people desire to dispose of the prohibition question with a plank condemning the Republicans and pledging impartial enforcement of all provisions of the constitution.

If the drys appeal to the convention, the wets, under Governor Ritchie of Maryland will retaliate. He will take direct issue with the Moody-Reed-Glass-Daniels faction and propose a plank giving the states the right to determine the liquor issue. It is in line with the oft-repeated declarations of Governor Smith.

"I do not want to make a speech," said Ritchie, "but I will feel compelled to if the drys bring the fight to the floor."

"The only way the prohibition question can get to the floor will be for the drys to bring it there. I am interested to know if Moody will go so far as to do that."

MISSOURI SENATOR PICKED BY FRIENDS AS VICE PRESIDENT

Robinson Favored By Smith Forces; Others In Race.

By WM. K. HUTCHINSON
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
HOUSTON, Tex., June 27.—A serious contest between Sen. James A. Reed of Missouri and Sen. Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, for the Democratic vice presidential nomination appeared in prospect today in event Gov. Al Smith is nominated to head the Democratic ticket.

Reed, however, appeared doomed to a double defeat, with the Smith organization throwing its support to Robinson for the vice presidency after first winning the presidential nomination for the New York executive. Every known Smith leader has gone about the convention city for the last three days openly predicting the ticket would be Smith and Robinson.

Some of Senator Reed's closest friends, meanwhile, were known to be angling to win the vice-presidential place for the Missourian. Reed thus far has refused to discuss any such ambition.

Despite this denial, reports emanating from Smith headquarters declared the Missourian's friends had been seeking a trade which would make the ticket "Smith and Reed."

"A dozen of Reed's generals have been around to our headquarters trying to arrange a trade," said one Smith leader. "All overtures have been rejected. Al Smith is nominated now and he will not countenance any trade anyway to win the nomination."

Robinson, meanwhile, remained almost in retirement, awaiting the hour when he will be called to the convention to become its permanent chairman. From then on, he will be in the center of the picture.

There will be a dozen more candidates offered the convention for the second place post. If Reed should launch a vicious fight for the vice presidency and force withdrawal of Robinson's candidacy in the interests of harmony, "a dry Protestant friendly to agriculture" will be named. Upon this the Smith managers were adamant.

Such a category would bring Sen. Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, former Sen. Gilbert M. Hitchcock of Nebraska, Gov. Vic Donahey of Ohio, and Rep. Cordell Hull of Tennessee strongly into the picture. All four could answer the Smith requirements but Barkley, coming from a border and doubtful state, might get the preference. His labor record, in addition to his active fight for farm relief legislation in the last congress, would help him.

The Smith managers, controlling a clear majority of the convention, were reported opposed to Reed, chiefly because the Missouri senator has a reputation as a "wet." To put Reed on the same ticket with Smith, the New Yorker's backers felt, would hurt their cause in dry states. They also feel Reed, on his record of opposing Woodrow Wilson in the League of Nations fight, would be of little help to Smith in the "solid south."

Unless Reed himself can stop Smith or bring about the nomination of a "dark horse," it appeared today that the ticket would be Smith and Robinson, just as it did at the end of last week.

THEA RASCHE WILL TRY OCEAN FLIGHT

GRANDE MERE, Que., June 27.—Miss Thea Rasche, the German aviatrix who plans to fly across the Atlantic to Berlin in the Bellanca monoplane North Star, today awaited the arrival here of her backer, Mrs. James A. Stillman, before making any definite announcement regarding her plans.

The North Star is now at the Cape De La Madeleine airport, near Three Rivers. Pilot Koenig, who flew the plane there from Haddley Field, N. J., will put it through several tests before Miss Rasche starts her flight. It is believed probable the aviatrix will stop for fuel in Newfoundland before heading over the Atlantic.

POLICEMAN IS HURT
COLUMBUS, O., June 27.—Patrolman E. N. Davidson, of the city police force is in a hospital today with bruises and possible internal injuries suffered last night when he fell into the draining pit of an oil station here while patrolling his beat, according to a police report.

EX-XENIANS ASKED FOR DONATIONS

Fifteen wealthy former residents of Xenia have been solicited for donations of $1,000 each by the Executive Committee of the 1928 Greene County Home-Coming Association in order to finance the proposed erection of an auditorium, or community house in Shawnee Park. This plan for obtaining funds for building the auditorium was disclosed at the Home-Coming "booster" banquet Tuesday night by T. H. Zell, chairman of the committee. The names of former Xenians from whom gifts of $1,000 are received will be inscribed on a bronze tablet to be placed on the building as a permanent memorial. Telegrams have been sent to the following former residents: Corry Fleming, 130 E. 67th St., New York City; James Hopkins, 332 S. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill.; Dr. Grant Chase, 3752 McKinley St., Chevy Chase, Md.; Blar McElroy, 202 S. State St., Chicago, Ill.; George Haninger, 1500 N. Florence Ave., El Paso, Texas; W. F. Hynes, 1126 Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill.; Frank Connable, Dilport Co., Wilmington, Del.; Russell Greiner, 2609 Walnut St., Kansas City, Mo.; Will Prugh, Box 840, R. F. D. CHICAGO LABOR CHIEF SLAIN BY MACHINE GUN FIRED FROM AUTO

CHICAGO, June 27.—"Big Tim" Murphy, labor leader, politician and "racketeer" of luxe, lay dead here today—a victim of machine gun bullets. Chicago's most picturesque demagogue was mowed down by leaden slugs on the front lawn of his Rogers Park home late last night after he had answered a mysterious summons to his front door. When the deadly rattle of the machine gun died away, the gangster assassins had bagged their most prominent quarry since the dramatic shooting several years ago of Dion O'Banion. Murphy, whose checkered career has perhaps been more colorful than any other of his kind, was listening in on the radio to the Democratic convention when his front door bell rang. With him was his brother-in-law, Harry Diggs. Remembering his gangland schooling, Murphy peered from a side door for a glimpse of the party who had rung his front door bell. He saw no one. Followed by Diggs he stepped onto the lawn to investigate. Simultaneously a large closed automobile rolled past the house. Before Murphy could retreat there was a spurt of flame from the automobile accompanied by the crackling of a machine gun. "Big Tim" instinctively dropped to the ground but the sweep of the death-dealing gun was lowered to rake the lawn. Murphy was trapped in the range of fire and his body riddled with bullets. Diggs, who had leaped backward, escaped the hail of lead. As the death car sped away, after a full minute of firing, Diggs dragged the limp form of Murphy into the house. He was dead. Five minutes after Chief of Detectives William O'Connor had arrived on the scene, he ordered a search for "Mike De Pike" Heitler, West Side underworld character and notorious as an operator of gambling and vice resorts.

LEGION WILL ASK STRONGER NAVY

HOUSTON, Tex., June 27.—Demand for a strong declaration in favor of an American navy equal to the best in the world was served upon Democratic chiefs today by John T. Taylor, legislative representative of the American Legion.

"We want the 5-5-3 ratio of the Washington treaty maintained, and we are far below it now," said Taylor.

The legion also will ask the party to accept its universal conscription proposal and pledge its support to hospitalization of all war veterans regardless of the source of their ailments.

JAIL BREAK FOILED
ELMIRA, N. Y., June 27.—Following the frustration of a plot to kill the guards at the Elmira Reformatory and escape, one convict is dead, another is seriously injured and two badly beaten guards are in Arnot Ogden hospital today.

SENATORS WRITE DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM

HOUSTON, Tex., June 27.—Again a group of senators is writing the Democratic platform. There are no less than ten on the platform committee, headed by Sen. Key Pittman of Nevada. Senatorial colleagues not on the committee also are assisting in framing the draft. The Wilson influence is represented by Newton D. Baker, ex-secretary of war, who is the Ohio member.

Senator Wagner of New York, one of Governor Smith's closest friends and advisers, is spokesman on the committee for the New Yorker. He has the support chiefly of Senators Walsh of Massachusetts, Edwards of New Jersey and Tydings of Maryland.

BELIEVED TEN DIED WHEN NOBLE CREW CRASHED IN ARCTIC

Nobile Says Motor Attendant Killed When Bag Fell.

By International News Service
Of the sixteen men aboard the Italian polar balloon Italia when it met with disaster over the Arctic on May 25, only two have been saved, four others are located on the ice, one is dead and nine are missing.

Gen. Umberto Nobile, chief of the expedition, and Motor Chief Natale Cecconi were saved.

Motor Attendant Vincent Pomella (Vicenzo Pomella) was killed. Four of Nobile's companions and Swedish Reiter aviator Lieut. Lundborg are marooned on an ice floe off Foyne Island.

The fate of the six men who were carried away with the envelope of the Italia and the fate of Prof. Malmgren and his two companions is not known.

The fate of the six men who were carried away with the envelope of the Italia and the fate of Prof. Malmgren and his two companions is not known.

Capt. Roald Amundsen, Lieut. Dietrichsen and French aviator Rene Gullaud, who were lost while seeking the Nobile group, are still missing and their fate and whereabouts are not definitely known, although their plane was reported wrecked off the south-eastern coast of Spitzbergen.

ROME, June 27.—In an official communique to the Italian government, General Umberto Nobile, the commander of the ill-fated dirigible Italia who is now safely aboard the Cliza Di Milano, today revealed for the first time that Vincent Pomella, chief motor mechanic of the airship, was instantly killed when the craft crashed to the ice on the morning of May 25.

Pomella's body was later recovered by other members of the Italia's crew, Nobile said, and buried with appropriate honors.

Nobile also stated that when the gas bag of the dirigible floated away with six men aboard following the crash of the gondola, a column of smoke appeared on the spot on the horizon where it was last seen, about ten kilometers away from the scene of the crash.

Nobile expressed the belief that it was possible that a gas tank attached to the floating portion of the dirigible ignited in the crash and set fire to the bag.

This revelation by Nobile gave rise to fears here that the six men aboard the dirigible's gas bag were burned to death. No sign of them has been found by any of the relief airplanes, nor has the wreckage of the Italia been sighted.

SPANISH WAR VETERANS HEAR DEFENSE OF O. S. AND S. O. HOME

CHILLICOTHE, O., June 27.—With the delegates still discussing the proposal to close the Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home at Xenia, the third day of the convention of the United Spanish War Veterans swung under way here today.

Judge E. S. Matthias, Van Wert, department commander, late yesterday assailed the proposal to abandon the Home and called for the "improvement and extension of the Home."

Matthias proposed that a joint committee look into the conditions of the Xenia Home. "Abandonment is not the answer to unsatisfactory conditions," the judge declared.

In his speech the judge called for co-operation between the Spanish War Veterans and the American Legion.

FARM CHIEFS THINK SUCCESS IN RELIEF FIGHT IS NEARING

Baruch Works With Leaders To Draft Acceptable Plank

HOUSTON, Tex., June 27.—Pilots of the "on to Houston" movement today envisioned an approaching victory in the farm relief fight as the word went out that the Al Smith forces had decided to make a strong bid for the corn belt vote. A wave of pessimism which swept over the bivouac of the farm chiefs yesterday was succeeded by a genuine note of enthusiasm born of contact with high chiefs in the Smith camp.

Bernard Baruch, millionaire New York banker, was said to have stepped into the breach to renew a World War co-partnership with George N. Peek of Moline, Ill., chief strategist of the assembled farm group.

"I believe we will solve the problem and meet the needs of the farmer," said Baruch, after a conference with Peek.

During the World War Baruch was chairman of the war industries board and Peek was a member. Despite their widely separated fields of activity they have retained a close friendship and now are endeavoring to frame an alliance which they believe may vitally affect the election.

While Baruch was acting for the Smith forces, a senatorial group which backed the McNary-Haugen bill was also seeking to overcome barriers facing the farm movement.

The farm leaders were building up their forces by getting powerful spokesmen named as members of the resolutions committee, each state delegation choosing one member.

Wilbur Marsh of Iowa and John Simpson of Oklahoma both avowed champions of farm relief, promised to make a fight to a finish in the resolutions committee.

One of the troublesome problems—squaring endorsement of the McNary-Haugen bill, based on the tariff, with a Democratic low tariff policy—was said to be near solution today.

CHAIRMAN ASSUMES CHARGE; PLATFORM COMMITTEE AT WORK

Smith Forces Win First Brush In Louisiana Fight

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

HOUSTON, Tex., June 27.—After effecting permanent organization and hearing the speech of Senator J. T. Robinson, Arkansas, chairman, the Democratic convention recessed until 7:15. Central standard time to night to hear the platform read, if it is prepared, and to hear nominating speeches, if the platform is not finished. The nominating speech of Governor Smith, who is expected to be the nominee, will be delivered by Franklin D. Roosevelt and will be seconded by Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, former governor of Wyoming. George V. a Namee, Smith manager here, prophesied this afternoon that there would be no convention fight on the prohibition platform plank.

SAM HOUSTON HALL, HOUSTON, Tex., June 27.—While the platform builders took off their coats today and went to it behind closed doors, the thousand-odd other delegates to the Democratic national convention trooped perspiringly again to Sam Houston's glittering pine palace for another act in the quadrennial show.

Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, who presided over the stormy San Francisco convention eight years ago and who is the probably running mate for Governor Al Smith in this one, was the ringmaster of the day. His speech as permanent chairman of this convention was calculated to still further drive home to Democrats the party need for agreement and not dissension on the eve of the campaign.

Robinson brought the entire convention to its feet and precipitated a wild demonstration when he made a plea for religious tolerance, and declared that religion would play no part in the convention. A parade immediately formed, led by Mississippi, including every state in the union with the exception of Alabama, Tennessee and Virginia. Battles for possession of the Tennessee and Alabama banners were waged but the delegations retreated in their seats. The reference to religion was not in the prepared speech of Senator Robinson and the demonstration seemed to indicate another point in favor of the nomination of Alfred E. Smith.

A test fight that may afford the first official in sight into the overwhelming power of the Smith forces appeared not improbable as the session got under way.

The credentials committee voted forty-two to seven early this morning to seat the Smith delegation of twenty from Louisiana, as opposed to the anti-Smith faction backed by Mrs. Genevieve Clark Thomson of New Orleans, a daughter of the late Champ Clark, who has been an indefatigable worker for Senator Reed of Missouri.

The ousted delegation threatened to force a vote in the convention itself on the action of the credentials committee by presenting a minority report.

SAM HOUSTON HALL, HOUSTON, Tex., June 27.—Considerable oil was poured today on the troubled political waters through which the Democratic national convention is sailing toward decision on candidates and platform.

Sen. Joe Robinson, of Arkansas, himself likely running mate for Gov. Al Smith, assumed command of the convention as permanent chairman.

LONDON, June 27.—Miss Amelia Earhart, will leave for Southampton today preparatory to sailing for America aboard the liner President Roosevelt tomorrow with her two flying companions, Wilmer Stultz and Lou Gordon.

She was unable to meet the Prince of Wales last night. The prince was expected at the Olympia horse show but did not appear.

Keep The Home Fires Burning

AN ALLEGORY AND AN ACROSTIC

An allegory and an acrostic contribute to the appeal Xenia children are making in the interests of Xenia.

The allegory was written by Helen Downes, 22 Maple St., and was sixth prize winner in the ad-writing contest conducted recently by the Xenia Retail Merchants Association.

The acrostic was composed by Margaret Mc Donnell, 77 Walnut St., and won for her seventh place among the prize winners in the contest conducted by the merchants. The acrostic is based on the motto "PROSPERITY IN XENIA", and is written in rhyme.

In Miss Downes' allegory she pictures Greene County worrying over the affairs of Xenia as a mother worries over her child. She suggests that Dr. Cooperation, with the aid of those good and loyal citizens who still make their homes here, can save Xenia from a dismal future. The writer illustrated her advertisement, but, unfortunately, the drawing was not suitable for reproduction.

The acrostic offers as a means of gaining "prosperity in Xenia", the custom of patronizing home town merchants, which has been frequently suggested as one means for bringing about a bigger and better Xenia.

Thus two young girls have offered for the consideration of maturer heads, the answer to the problems that have been troubling them. If the younger generation is true to such loyal expressions, then perhaps the future of Xenia is not so dark after all. Lessons for readers may be found in the two manuscripts, submitted below.

As Mother Greene County sits before the fire place gazing into the glowing embers a vision of long gone days passes before her and she sees her little daughter Xenia, develop from a toddling infant into happy childhood and then to attractive maidenhood.

Many were Xenia's suitors from nearby towns, as the years passed on but she spurned them all for her own home merchants.

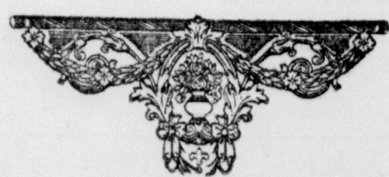

As a result she was the belle of the county and was feted and praised by all who knew her. Youth glided into maturer years but still Xenia, now a stately maiden, held her own, and then misfortune came. A sad misfortune too in the form of disloyalty from her own family. She bore her sorrow as best she could for a while, but the heart ache was too much for her and gradually her bright eyes dimmed and her step became slower. Her condition is precarious and Mother Greene County looking into the embers sees the future as she sees the past. Must her child leave her? Is there no hope?

Only members of her own family can save her, through the aid of Dr. Co-operation. She can be saved. The question is. Will she be?

Miss Henryetta Logan To Be Summer Bride

Informal announcement is being made of the coming marriage of Miss Henryetta Logan, prominent young woman of the city and Mr. Wilbur Shultz, Columbus, which is to take place the latter part of this summer in this city.

Friends of the couple have been aware of the engagement but no formal announcement has been made. Mr. Shultz is engaged in the dry cleaning and tailoring business in Columbus. He is a graduate of Ohio Wesleyan University and is a member of Delta Tau Delta fraternity.

Miss Logan is state treasurer of the Ohio Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs and served two years as president of the Xenia Business and Professional Women's Club.

During the past year, she has been assistant director of dining halls at Denison University and she will continue her work after her marriage, and they will reside in Granville.

Announcement of her approaching marriage is received with interest and hearty felicitations on the part of Miss Logan's many friends in this city.

Miss Margaret Davis To Wed New Yorker

Miss S. Margaret Davis, New York, daughter of Mrs. Herbert Davis, St. Louis, Mo., will be married to Mr. Walter L. Patterson, London, Ky., in New York, Saturday.

The wedding ceremony will be quietly solemnized by Mrs. Davis, mother of the bride, left for New York Wednesday to witness the nuptials. It was originally planned to have the marriage take place at the bride's home here, but the recent death of her father caused the change in arrangements.

Miss Davis is a graduate of Central High School and of Oberlin College and spent a year in Mexico as a teacher in the Girl's Industrial School.

She taught in Wilmington High School after returning to this country and later went to New York where she entered the School of Social Work. She then did settlement work in the Henry St. Settlement House and took a course in Commercial Spanish at Columbia University. She is now head cashier in a Child's Restaurant in New York.

Mr. Patterson was attending the University of Tennessee during the World War and left his studies to enlist. He served overseas and remained with the Army of Occupation. He had an enviable athletic record while serving in the army and was a fullback on the Army Team in 1924. He is also an expert polo player, won a sharpshooter's record in 1926 and won a track record over 17,000 men in the army. He has a responsible position with the American Truck Co., a bonding house in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Patterson will reside in Brooklyn after their marriage.

MRS. SHACK HONOR GUEST AT "SHOWERS"

Mrs. Clarence Horen and Miss Bessie Kennedy were hostesses Friday evening, complimenting Mrs. Stanley Shack (Vida Witham). A group of young women were entertained at the Horen home on W. Second St., and spent the evening hemming dustcloths for Mrs. Shack.

Luncheon was served later and a social time enjoyed. Mrs. Shack received an array of miscellaneous gifts.

TOURNAMENT, CARDS AND DINNER AT CLUB

After a number of the members had spent the late afternoon in a mixed tournament on the course, a delicious dinner was enjoyed at the Country Club, followed by bridge, Tuesday evening.

The affair was delightful in its informality, and was indulged in by a large group of the club membership.

Miss Margaret O'Connor, Dayton Ave., domestic science instructor at Miami University, Oxford, left Tuesday night for Montreal, where she will join a party of friends and sail Friday for Europe to spend the summer. She will visit over the British Isles and through the entire continent and will return for the opening of school.

Mrs. Henry G. Dietz and two children, of Denver, Colo., arrived Saturday for an extended visit with Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Bone, Springfield Pike.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Jordan, (La Verna Cline) Portland, Ore., are visiting Mrs. J. N. Witham. Mr. and Mrs. Jordan motored through, arriving in Xenia Sunday noon.

Mr. and Mrs. John Dymond spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Hawkins, Mount Sterling, formerly of Xenia. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sanderson, Leesburg, were also visitors at the Hawkins home.

Mrs. William E. Gilmore, Fairfield, will arrive home Sunday from Washington, D. C., where she has been spending several weeks.

Women's Auxiliary, First Baptist Church, will meet at the church for a business meeting Thursday afternoon at 1:30. All women of the church are urged to attend.

Takes Lead

Girls like this who have learned the art of keeping themselves always attractive usually lead wherever they may be. She follows the rule. She's Carlotta Marino, of 57 West 58th St., New York City, much admired in the Vanties, the Follies and George White's Scandals, and feminine star of the movie hit, "No Trespassing." She says: "When people admire my complexion or my hair, I tell them they can easily keep them the same way by simple care. The new way so many of us have in New York are doing our hair is especially easy. All we do is put a few dashes of Danderine on our brushes every time we use them."

"It is marvelous to see how beautifully clean and shining this keeps your hair. I don't have to shampoo half as often now. I set my waves with Danderine, too, and it holds them ever so much longer. All dandruff disappeared with a few applications and my scalp always feels fine now."

Danderine removes that oily film from your hair and gives it new life and lustre. It isn't oily and doesn't show. It gives tone and vigor to the scalp. The generous bottles are just 35c at any drug store. A delicately fragrant toilet necessity for the well-groomed girl. Adv.

STAND FOR HOME

An appeal by their commander, Justice E. S. OTEY WILL MAKE SPEECH

Orders Tonsil Polish To Prepare For Addressing Democrat Delegates.

By MARSHAL OTEY WALKER
Special Central Press Correspondent For The Gazette and Delegate to the Democratic Convention

HOUSTON, Tex., June 27.—When I get back to the Old Home Town I guess I'll have lost my job as marshal. You see, I may have a new one—that of Democratic spokesman.

Before coming to this beautiful city I didn't realize just how good a Democrat I really was. But now I'm a Jeffersonian free silver Bryan anti-tariff Smith Democrat with an Alabama accent and a Broadway corkscrew.

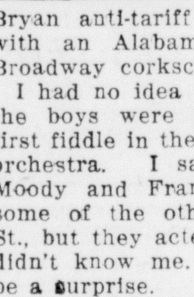

I had no idea this morning that the boys were grooming me for first fiddle in the Houston political orchestra. I saw Governor Dan Moody and Frank Roosevelt and some of the other boys in Main St., but they acted as though they didn't know me. Maybe it was to be a surprise.

The first thing I knew of it was when I picked up a newspaper in Herman park and saw a headline: "Walker to Make Important Speech." I didn't stop to read the article; I let out a whoop and turned a couple of handprings. I sat right down and figured out my speech. It will go something like this:

"Friends, fellow citizens, Democrats, gentlemen of the press, people of Houston and everybody else. (Applause). Unaccustomed as I am to public speaking, I shall make my talk as briefly as possible. (Tremendous applause)."

"This reminds of a little story. It seems there were two Irishmen, Otto and Agnes by name. (Applause), etc., etc."

It will all be along that line, but I can't reveal any more right now.

I then went to the Rice hotel, which is one of the biggest snore factories I have ever seen. I hung around the lobby in hopes Jim Reed or Tom Heflin might drop around to see me as to how I stand regarding their candidacy.

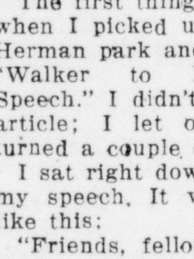

Well, I was leaning against a lobby pillar letting people look at me when a reporter came up and asked if I were Mr. Walker, and what would I do if I became president.

I told him. Four hours later, after he had run out of copy paper and cuffs making notes, he closed with a silly question:

"Mr. Walker, what are your future plans?" he asked, "will you run for re-election as mayor of New York?"

I was about to tell him I had never seen New York, much less run for mayor there, when someone beckoned to me. It was a friend of mine, an importer of Canadian goods. He wanted to tell me that the tonsil polish I had ordered had arrived, so I left.

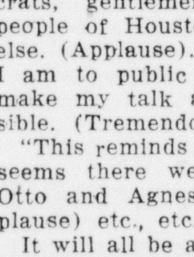

Now I wonder what that reporter meant about that crack about thinking me being the mayor of New York.

NEW YORK, June 27.—Plans for the giant automotive merger of Dodge Brothers Inc. and the Chrysler corporation stand suspended today. Decision is awaited in the action brought by minority stockholders of the former company for an injunction permanently restraining the combine.

While Supreme Court Justice George Sullivan heard arguments yesterday, he suggested that the question might be one for the Maryland courts to determine since the Dodge Company is a Maryland corporation.

Henry P. Holtzhusen, counsel for Col. Calvin N. Goddard, who seeks to have a temporary injunction granted him against the merger made permanent, contended that the merger plan was "an appeal to speculative cupidity in exciting anticipation of an increase in dividends of the Chrysler corporation." The plaintiff alleged that the merger was "essential unlawful."

One arrest was made and a second is pending as a result of two raids conducted Tuesday by State Prohibition Agents McGriff and Davis, Dayton, Ford Long, Montgomery County Sheriff and Sheriff Ohmer Tate.

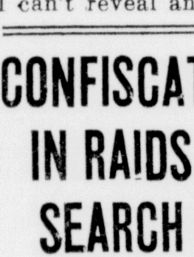

A small still was confiscated in a raid on the farm of Thomas Mahoney, New Jasper Pike. The apparatus had been taken apart and the various parts concealed in different places. All of the pieces but one were found.

Three or four plants of liquor were also said to have been found by the officers.

Mahoney was not at home when the raid was made and he was being made the object of a search Wednesday.

Charles Smith, colored, Cedarville was arrested following a raid on his home in which the officers reported finding several quarts of corn whiskey. He was lodged in the County Jail pending arraignment in Probate Court.

Several other raids were also made in various parts of the county which were unproductive of the discovery of evidence and no arrests were made.

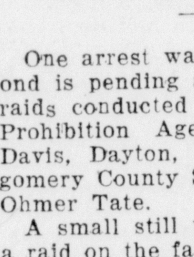

THE JAMESTOWN CLUB TO PRESENT REVUE

ELECTION OF SMITH SEEN BY ELIZABETH MARBURY NEXT FALL

Says President Can Not Alter Laws On Prohibition

By ELIZABETH MARBURY
Veteran Democratic Committee Woman from New York

HOUSTON, Tex., June 27.—Gov. Alfred E. Smith will be elected president of the United States, not because of his personal views on prohibition, but because he has two outstanding qualifications—integrity and sincerity.

I cannot understand all this talk about prohibition because that, I am convinced, will not be an issue in the coming campaign. It doesn't make any difference whether a president is wet or dry. He has nothing to say about changing the law. The only people who can change or modify the law are members of congress.

I might say right here that I am a little suspicious of some of the hopes that we hear about congress. I am inclined to believe that some of the congressmen vote dry and drink wet.

After a careful study of the situation, with an open mind, I have reached the conclusion that it is impossible to enforce prohibition under existing laws. The drys talk girbly about enforcement but I would like someone to give me a constructive policy as to how the law can be enforced under existing conditions.

Until the time comes when the rank and file of the citizens of the United States do not want intoxicating beverages brought into this country, the present prohibition law never will be enforced.

There are people who insist we ought to have prohibition, but if they are truthful they will admit that the present dry law is not being enforced. Millions of dollars are being spent annually to enforce this law but nothing is being accomplished. I am not holding the government responsible because I am convinced that no one man or set of men can enforce a law which does not bear the approval of the great mass of our people.

NEW JURY PANEL CALLED IN TOLEDO

TOLEDO, O., June 27.—With eleven tentative jurors occupying posts in the jury box and the original venire of seventy-five persons exhausted, a new panel of ninety-six prospective jurors was reported to Judge Milroy in Common Pleas Court here today as the third day of the trial of Charles (Stanley) Hoppe, alleged assassin of Dorothy Sielagowski, seven-year-old school girl got under way.

Twelve tentative jurors were seated yesterday when the defense began using its peremptory challenges. Defense counsel is using every precaution to keep jurors with children or grandchildren from sitting in the trial, due it is believed, to the nature of the crime involving the little girl.

Cascara is Your Doctor's Choice

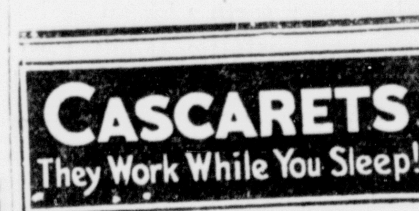

When physicians pronounce cascara the PERFECT laxative—why experiment with things that lash the system into action? Cascara, you know is the bark of a tree. A natural and normal stimulus to the bowels.

The Indians, who used to chew this bark, had no word in their language that meant "constipation."

Perfect regularity is possible today and to all of us. We have cascara in ideal form; the very delightful-tasting candy cascaret gives us pure cascara. It has helped at least a million people to habitual regularity. Millions of others, unfortunately, have stuck to stronger things and acquired only the laxative habit.

Your first cascaret will demonstrate how THOROUGH this gentle laxative is, after all. Your next surprise will be the length of time before you need another. Eventually, you'll see that cascaring tends to make the bowels move thereafter of their own accord!

A modern drug store must stock many laxatives, but for your own good the druggist would rather have you ask for the inexpensive little box of cascarets than anything else. Adv.

Miss Henryetta Logan To Be Summer Bride

Informal announcement is being made of the coming marriage of Miss Henryetta Logan, prominent young woman of the city and Mr. Wilbur Shultz, Columbus, which is to take place the latter part of this summer in this city.

Friends of the engagement have been aware of the engagement but no formal announcement has been made. Mr. Shultz is engaged in the dry cleaning and tailoring business in Columbus. He is a graduate of Ohio Wesleyan University and is a member of Delta Tau Delta fraternity.

Miss Logan is state treasurer of the Ohio Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs and served two years as president of the Xenia Business and Professional Women's Club.

During the past year, she has been assistant director of dining halls at Denison University and she will continue her work after her marriage, and they will reside in Granville.

Announcement of her approaching marriage is received with interest and hearty congratulations on the part of Miss Logan's many friends in this city.

Miss Margaret Davis To Wed New Yorker

Miss S. Margaret Davis, New York, daughter of Mrs. Herbert Davis, S. Detroit St., will be married to Mr. Walter L. Patterson, London, Ky., in New York, Saturday.

The wedding ceremony will be quietly solemnized. Mrs. Davis, mother of the bride, left for New York Wednesday to witness the nuptials. It was originally planned to have the marriage take place at the bride's home here, but the recent death of her father caused the change in arrangements.

Miss Davis is a graduate of Central High School and of Oberlin College and spent a year in Mexico as a teacher in the Girls' Industrial School.

She taught in Wilmington High School after returning to this country and later went to New York where she entered the School of Social Work. She then did settlement work in the Henry St. Settlement House and took a course in Commercial Spanish at Columbia University. She is now head cashier in a Child's Restaurant in New York.

Mr. Patterson was attending the University of Tennessee during the World War and left his studies to enlist. He served overseas and remained with the Army of Occupation. He had an enviable athletic record while serving in the army and was a fullback on the Army Team in 1924. He is also an expert polo player, won a sharpshooter's record in 1926 and won a track record over 17,000 men in the army. He has a responsible position with the American Truck Co., a bonding house in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Patterson will reside in Brooklyn after their marriage.

MRS. SHACK HONOR GUEST AT "SHOWER"

Mrs. Clarence Horen and Miss Bessie Kennedy were hostesses Friday evening, complimenting Mrs. Stanley Shack (Vida Witham). A group of young women were entertained at the Horen home on W. Second St. and spent the evening hemming dustcloths for Mrs. Shack.

Luncheon was served later and a social time enjoyed. Mrs. Shack received an array of miscellaneous gifts.

TOURNAMENT, CARDS AND DINNER AT CLUB

After a number of the members had spent the late afternoon in a mixed tournament on the course, a delicious dinner was enjoyed at the Country Club, followed by bridge, Tuesday evening.

The affair was delightful in its informality, and was indulged in by a large group of the club membership.

Miss Margaret O'Connor, Dayton Ave., domestic science instructor at Miami University, Oxford, left Tuesday night for Montreal, where she will join a party of friends and sail Friday for Europe to spend the summer. She will visit over the British Isles and through the continent and will return for the opening of school.

Mrs. Henry G. Dietz and two children, of Denver, Colo., arrived Saturday for an extended visit with Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Bone, Springfield Pike.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Jordan, (La Verna Cline) Portland, Ore., are visiting Mrs. J. N. Witham. Mr. and Mrs. Jordan motored through, arriving in Xenia Sunday noon.

Mr. and Mrs. John Dymond spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Hawkins, Mount Sterling, formerly of Xenia. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sanderson, Leesburg, were also visitors at the Hawkins home.

Mrs. William E. Gilmore, Fairfield, will arrive home Sunday from Washington, D. C., where she has been spending several weeks.

Women's Auxiliary, First Baptist Church, will meet at the church for a business meeting Thursday afternoon at 1:30. All women of the church are urged to attend.

Takes Lead

Girls like this who have learned the art of keeping themselves always attractive usually lead wherever they may be. She follows the rule. She's Carlotta Marino, of 57 West 58th St., New York City, much admired in the Vanities, the Follies and George White's Scandals, and feminine star of the movie hit, "No Trespassing." She says: "When people admire my complexion or my hair, I tell them they can easily keep theirs the same way by simple care. The new way so many of us hope in New York are doing our hair is especially easy. All we do is put a few dashes of Danderine on our brushes every time we use them. "It is marvelous to see how beautifully clean and shining this keeps your hair. I don't have to shampoo half as often now. I set my waves with Danderine, too, and it holds them ever so much longer. All dandruff disappeared with a few applications and my scalp always feels fine now."

Danderine removes that oily film from your hair and gives it new life and lustre. It isn't oily and doesn't show. It gives tone and vigor to the scalp. The generous bottles are just 35c at any drug store. A delicately fragrant toilet necessity for the well-groomed girl.

Miss Margaretie Zeiner, who has been touring the west with her mother, Mrs. Alton Zeiner, James town, is now in Los Angeles where she is studying violin under Prof. Joseph Zoellner of the Zoellner Conservatory of Music. She will complete the summer's course and will return home with her mother in the fall.

OTey WILL MAKE SPEECH

Orders Tonsil Polish To Prepare For Addressing Democrat Delegates.

By MARSHAL OTEY WALKER
Special Central Press Correspondent for The Gazette and Delegate to the Democratic Convention

HOUSTON, Tex., June 27.—When I get back to the Old Home Town I guess I'll have lost my job as marshal. You see, I may have a new one—that of Democratic spokesman.

Before coming to this beautiful city I didn't realize just how good a Democrat I really was. But now I'm a Jeffersonian dry south-eastern silver Bryan anti-tariff Smith Democrat with an Alabama accent and a Broadway corkscrew.

I had no idea this morning that the boys were grooming me for first fiddle in the Houston political orchestra. I saw Governor Dan Moody and Frank Roosevelt and some of the other boys in Main St., but they acted as though they didn't know me. Maybe it was to be a surprise.

The first thing I knew of it was when I picked up a newspaper in Herman park and saw a headline: "Walker to Make Important Speech." I didn't stop to read the article; I let out a whoop and turned a couple of handsprings.

I sat right down and figured out my speech. It will go something like this:

"Friends, fellow citizens, Democrats, gentlemen of the press, people of Houston and everybody else. (Applause). Unaccustomed as I am to public speaking, I shall make my talk as briefly as possible. (Tremendous applause). This reminds me of a little story. It seems there were two Irishmen, Otto and Agnes by name. (Applause) etc., etc."

It will all be along that line, but I can't reveal any more right now.

NEW YORK, June 27.—Plans for the giant automotive merger of Dodge Brothers Inc. and the Chrysler corporation stand suspended today. Decision is awaited in the action brought by minority stockholders of the former company for an injunction permanently restraining the combine.

The plaintiff alleged that the merger was "essential unlawful."

CONFISCATE STILL IN RAIDS TUESDAY; SEARCH FOR OWNER

One arrest was made and a second is pending as a result of two raids conducted Tuesday by State Prohibition Agents McGriff and Davis, Dayton, Ford Long, Montgomery County Sheriff and Sheriff Ohmer Tate.

ROBERT MANTELL IS CLAIMED BY DEATH

ATLANTIC HIGHLANDS, N. J., June 27.—Robert B. Mantell, noted Shakespearean actor, died shortly after noon today at his country home, "Brucedwood," here.

With Mr. Mantell when he died were his wife, Mrs. Genevieve Hammer Mantell, and their son, Bruce. A daughter was reported to be on her way from the Pacific coast, but failed to arrive in time to be at her father's bedside.

Mr. Mantell suffered a general breakdown about six weeks ago while on a tour with his Shakespearean theatrical company in Baltimore, Washington and other Eastern cities. This breakdown followed another less serious, suffered last winter while the veteran actor and producer was touring in the West. For the past week Mr. Mantell's condition had been regarded as critical.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE MIGHTIEST—He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty; and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city.—Prov. 16:32.

WORLD'S HARDEST JOB

The most significant thing about the final retirement of President Coolidge, is that the third term precedent is not to be broken, although it is not clear whether this had any part in Mr. Coolidge's decision.

Opinions differ greatly as to whether a third presidential term would be a menace. But the fact that many people feel it would be, acts as a barrier tending to prevent any president from obtaining a third term. The burden of the office is so heavy that most presidents who have had a second term, have been glad enough to quit their heavy job. And the burden grows worse every year.

The American people seem to squeeze the life out of a president in a double term, and few men would have the vitality or energy with which to pick up the load for four years more.

STILL CHEERING

The cheers, which greeted von Huenefeld and his comrades of the Bremen in America, are now being heard in Europe. Germany is welcoming its two famous airmen and their Irish associate with an enthusiasm which rivals even the picturesque demonstration staged in their honor in New York. Water craft and airplanes clustered around and over the liner Columbus as it bore them into the mouth of the Weser. German officials and American consular representatives read warm speeches of welcome. The populace shouted itself hoarse.

To Americans all this acclaim may seem a bit anti-climatic. They are forgetting their own enthusiastic tributes to the Bremen fliers amid cheers for more recent conquests of both the Atlantic and the Pacific. But to Germany von Huenefeld and Koehl will long remain national heroes, not only because of their great flight, but because of the spirit of international good will they helped to advance.

RUSSIA HAS ADVANTAGE

Russia's very backwardness in other respects facilitates the development of Russian aviation, according to General William Mitchell.

"Commercial aviation in Russia," says General Mitchell, "has a great advantage over that of other countries, in that her railroad and motor facilities are so inadequate. At present her total rail mileage does not exceed 42,250 miles. Naturally, this can serve only a small proportion of her total area.

"The United States, in proportion to its area, has about 18 times as much track. In southern Russia—through Turkestan for instance, where air lines are now operating—the airplane's only competitors are the camel and the horse. No roads exist that will accommodate automobile traffic. In the north, through Siberia, dog teams and reindeer furnish the only other means of transportation."

This, according to General Mitchell, writing in the Forum, is of especial importance to the United States, since Russia is already a nearer neighbor than most Americans realize. Her Siberian territory nearly touches Alaska, and the airplane will bring both countries closer in the future.

NEW YORK, June 27.—Evening slippers, costing $500 and more a pair, are being worn at some of the dancs this season. Some of these expensive shoes are of hand-embroidered tapestry, with every figure in the design perfect. Some are hand-painted by noted artists, and others are of hummingbird feathers. All of them are manufactured in Italy and France.

It costs money not to be bored by after-dinner speakers in New York. Humorists, explorers or other interesting talkers are hired as guests by sponsors who want to make sure that banquets attract a crowd and serve their purpose.

Will Rogers is in big demand as a speaker, and is paid as much as $2,000 an evening. In order to obtain him for a dinner, a Boston organization paid him more than that price and also supplied round-trip airplane fare from Los Angeles, where he lives.

Banquet sponsors get back some of the outlay for speakers by selling the radio rights. Because of this, performers who used to donate their services for testimonial dinners, etc., now demand payment.

Allaying reports that he was preparing to quit his job, George Horace Lorimer, editor of the Saturday Evening Post, wrote a New York friend that he "doesn't need a rest, doesn't want a rest, and isn't going to take a rest."

THAT MARVELOUS HOMING INSTINCT

How does a dog find his way home over a long distance if he has been taken from home in a vehicle and can't use his scent to back track?

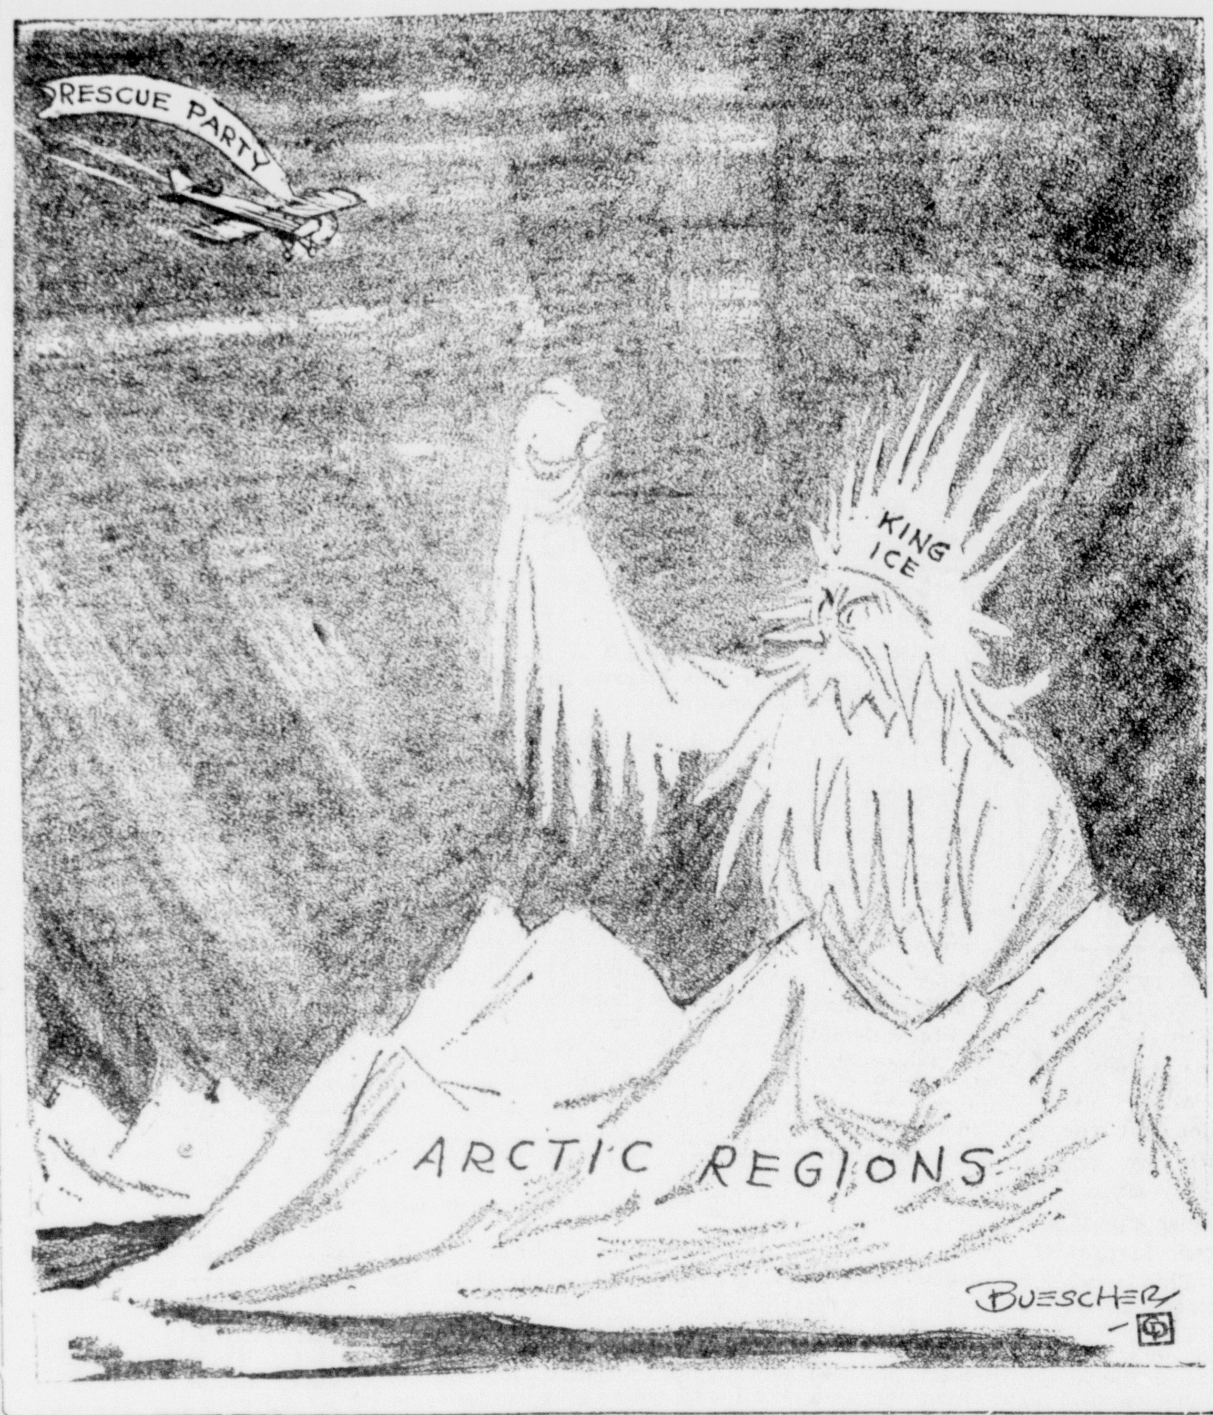

I had a cocker spaniel with me when camping one summer on an island in a large lake in the wilds of Canada. One afternoon, on returning to the island by motor boat from a trip to shore after supplies, I discovered that the dog was not in the boat. I started back after him, and found him swimming toward the island by as direct a route as if he had been guided by a compass. It was the first time he had ever been swimming, but of course, he instinctively knew that he could swim. Another time, in the same lake, the dog was left behind, but instead of swimming toward the island, he went first to another one. The explanation was that we had been building a cabin that day, and a man on the other island had also been building something. Evidently the dog let himself be guided partly by his hearing, and when he heard hammering, he said to himself: "Over yonder doesn't seem like the right direction, but there's the noise, so it must be the place." However, when he got there and discovered his error, he promptly started off in exactly the right direction.

A newspaper story appeared in 1924 about a dog reported to have traveled from Wolcott, Ind., to Silverton, Ore. I had half doubted the story, and wrote to the postmaster at Silverton for confirmation. Mr. R. G. Allen, the postmaster, wrote back: "The story is true. I have known the family for years, and could also recognize the dog any place on account of some injuries he received when a pup."

An anonymous writer in the Saturday Evening Post, a few years ago, told of what he regarded as the classic American case of the homing instinct, that of a dog known as Old Seminole, once owned by a fox hunter, Judge C. Floyd Hough, of Hot Springs, Ark. On a November day in 1912, at Crab Orchard, Ky., Old Seminole along with other hunters, was set upon a fox trail. The other dogs returned that morning, but when night came Old Seminole was still missing. She had been brought to Kentucky by train and was about 600 miles from home. She was given up as lost. Her owner posted circulars, and advertised in newspapers, offering a reward for her return, but nothing was heard of her until more than two months later, when she came limping into her old home in Arkansas. She was barely able to walk. To reach her home she had had to cross the Mississippi river, the Arkansas river, White river, as well as many lesser streams, and in the dead of winter.

Ned Hewitt, of Germantown Park, New York City, told me of a dog belonging to friends of his, who spent a summer in the Catskills. On the way back to their home in New York the dog became separated from them—in New Jersey. They gave him up as lost. The next day the dog appeared at their door. He had had to swim the river, or else had contrived to take the proper ferry, and then had to make his way across the perilous streets of the metropolis, with all the countless distractions and conflicting sidewalk odors that

How to Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

Naturally, there is the impression in the United States that American women are the most beautiful in the world. But ARE they?

The woman best qualified to answer the question, Mme. Helena Rubinstein, internationally noted authority on cultivation and preservation of beauty, does so in a series of articles in which she compares the beauty characteristics of American women with those of foreign women, and sums up the beauty secrets of all countries.

Beauty's Fundamentals Are Universal

Humans are so constituted that frequently what is beauty to one is ugliness to another. Nevertheless, there are certain fundamentals of loveliness that are universal in their appreciation.

The Norse beauty is fair haired and blue eyed, the Latin beauty has great black eyes and skin as dark as her northern cousin's is fair. But for them all, Norse, Celt, Latin or Slav, there are rules of loveliness that were old when Michael Angelo was yet unborn. Time has not changed them—nor will custom vary their acceptance.

Youth is not an essential of beauty. Youthfulness at every age, yes, but the youth of few years is neither an asset nor a liability to loveliness. It is no more than a state of being, an atmosphere to which we must bring beauty!

A pretty complexion, bright eyes, lustrous hair, all of these are the undeniable beauty requisites, and all of these apply as well to the women of one nation as to another.

The shape of the face can vary from the heart-shaped, piquant form of the French beauty to the broad oval of the Scandinavian, but if the contour is clear and firm, with no sign of drooping muscles, or sagging chin, there will be beauty in each of them.

Those who travel widely inevitably notice the tremendous differences in racial types and racial beauties. Undoubtedly there are certain skin types that are completely representative of a particular nation or country. There is an English skin, a French skin, an Italian skin, a Scandinavian skin, and so on, each differing in its aspect, its care and its treatment. Why this should be so, I am going to tell you.

In this great country, affected by all sorts of climates, we have distinct sectional types of beauty. We have a great coastal area, and in it we find a type of beauty not unlike that brought about by the same climatic conditions in England, Italy, France and Algiers. The beauty problems of the women of New England, coastal states, New York, southern coastal states, etc., are much the same as those of women of England.

Adhesions.
"Will a pain in the side that comes from deep breathing caused from adhesions due to a former case of plural tuberculosis, eventually leave? An X-Ray has shown that all tuberculosis is gone."
"For the benefit of those ambitious diet fans, I will add that this plural tuberculosis that I had came from dieting too strenuously to reduce and too much golf, tennis, and swimming at the same time. Since then I've tried you way and feel fine and am normal weight."

Apparently the development of adhesions is more or less an individual question.
Dr. Susan Offutt, of the Mayo clinic, tells me that it is the experience of the clinic that some persons seem to develop adhesions from slight inflammations and minor operations, while others do not, even after graver inflammations.

To help prevent the formation of adhesions, it is now the practice among surgeons to have their patients in cases that permit it, change their positions and have some form of passive exercise, and perhaps some form of active exercise, before they are out of bed. Then the gradual active exercises are given.

Occasionally, adhesions are of such a nature that an operation has to be performed to release them, but the majority become used to the slight inconvenience, which may lessen.

Today's Recipes

New England Pot Roast—The average pot roast is seared first and then simmered until tender, but this recipe works the other way about. Get a piece of bottom round about two and one-half pounds, put in a covered kettle with one cup of water and about three tablespoons of minced suet. Allow to cook at a gentle boil for two hours, being careful not to allow it to boil dry, but at the same time not using too much water. After it has cooked two hours, remove the cover and add two teaspoons of salt and boil briskly until the water has evaporated, then brown the meat well in the suet in the bottom of the kettle. Remove the meat, add two tablespoons of flour to the fat in the kettle, blend and add two cups of water, cook until thick and smooth and serve.

Strawberry Trifle—Dip squares of sponge cake in orange juice and cover with partly crushed, sweetened strawberries.

SUGGESTIONS

Hurrying the Ironing
When in a hurry to iron dry clothes sprinkle them with very hot water or use cold water and wrap them in a bath towel, placing them in a moderately hot oven. In either case they will be ready for the iron within half an hour.

Saves the Washboard.
Take a piece of rubber inner tube, smooth side down, on each side of the washboard on a line with the top of the wash tub. It prevents rubbing the wood away on the board and it stays where it is put.

As long as you take cathartics, Mrs. K., you will never have natural movements. You must remember that after stopping their use, it may be three or four days before there is a natural movement, and during that time you had better take small enemas. Don't be worried about it.

Behind The Scenes in Houston, Texas

By CHARLES P. STEWART

HOUSTON, June 27.—Senator Jim Reed of Missouri is the most picturesque figure at Houston.

Al Smith isn't here in person. He isn't Jim's type of an old viking, anyway. His may be the most magnetic personality on earth. Nobody disputes his prowess as a fighter. But granting him every other quality you please, he hasn't the beserk style of Senator Jim.

Reed simply hasn't an equal in his particular line. Others doubtless have lines just as good, but they're not the same.

Jim scuttled his ship as he went into this scrap. If he doesn't capture the presidential ship, his own will go down under him.

He passed up a renomination to the senate, which he could have had just as well as not, declaring he means to be president of the political death. His friends tried to talk him out of it, pointing out to him that his senatorship would be a mighty nice thing for him to have as a life preserver, if worst came to worst—and he wouldn't be stopped from fighting for the presidency in the meantime.

No, sir—that would be halfway work—none of it for Reed.

He gave up the home he has occupied in Washington for nearly 18 years, saying he'd be moving into the White House next—or going back to K. C.

Nerve!

Reed appears at Houston as a warrior pledged to conquer or perish.

He looks the part, too — this grim old man, approaching 70, with his white hair and iron visage—his flaming eye and his pitiless lips—his unmistakable expression of, "No quarter given or asked!"

On a recent speaking tour of the southwest, Jim had occasion to pay his respects—and precious few of 'em—to a senator from the town in which he happened to be making an address, and one of this senator's friends arose in the audience and said, "Say that to his face!"

It was the funniest thing that's likely to occur this campaign — such a remark to Jim Reed, who'd kick a raging lion in the slats and pull his wool and slap his chops and take a fresh grip on his unlighted cigar and proceed calmly on his way.

There'll be no foul ticktacks in the battle Senator Reed puts up. He hasn't it in him. But it won't be ladylike.

There was some surprise at the mildness of his tone, in his implied references to his leading rival, for awhile after he announced himself. There isn't any now. Seemingly the senator was just winding him self up. He did it good. No afraid of lions?—no, nor tigers, either, judging from some of the latest of his utterances.

He may be slain, but he won't be beaten, and the Houston victor will know he's been in a muss.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

Looking Ahead

I wonder how many of the girls who now write me to bemoan the fact that their boy friends are cool, will, 10 years from now, remember the pangs of love they are suffering. "Why do girls have to suffer the pangs of regret when our boy friends act so cool?" queries one damsel, and the boys who can't win the girl they want, echo the question, reversing the order of the sexes. Well, you know children, make a tame fuss sometimes when their parents deny them things they want, and which, if they got, would make them ill. Maybe it's that way with us, whether we're loveliest young people or older people who want things. Maybe if we got them we would find they were not what we wanted at all, and we would be unhappier than ever.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I think you are a little hard on the boy who signed himself 'Jim.' I am in something like Jim's place. Ten years ago I divorced my husband. I got the four minor children. I forgave my husband fully and wish him all success, even another wife, if he will be worthy of her. But I can never trust him again or respect him. All true love must have respect and admiration as well as sex appeal. I can forgive, but I cannot forget. I hope we may never meet again. I offered to let my oldest son—now of age—go to his father for a visit or to stay, if he chose. The boy, however, chose to stay with me."

"A SAD EYED BLOND."
Why, dear, a boy of 17 could hardly be expected to be very steadfast in his affections, and it would be too bad if he was. He probably likes you as well—possibly better—than any of his old-time girlfriends, and the kindest thing you can do is to continue to be friendly, but to leave him free to choose.

Seventeen and a half is not too young to have boy friends. "One Willing to Be Told," if you choose nice boys. You are correct about the "petting."

Some time ago I answered a letter from a young man who signed himself "Jim." He said he had broken his engagement to a young lady who confessed to him that she had not always been "good." I told him it was all right to break the engagement, feeling as he did, but I wondered if cases have been reversed whether he would have thought her justified in breaking with him, and I also commended her courage in confessing. One of our readers disagrees with my answer and writes as follows, in parenthesis I would say that I always welcome these letters of dissent.

To some it is given to love greatly even though the object of such love is unworthy; others, like yourself, demand respect and admiration before they can love. It is not for me to say which is the greater love. We have to make our decisions according to our own natures—our own codes. Your letter also raises once more the question of what forgiveness means. For myself, when I cannot forget an offense against myself, I feel I have not truly forgiven. But, of course, this "forgetting" is not an entire blotting out of the fault. That is near of the penalty one must pay for transgressing. There is always—no matter how hard one tries to blot it out—a certain suspicion left, way back in one's mind, that will assert itself sometimes.

"Hello, friend," came a low, choky whisper. "I was expecting you. How are things among the sand hills? I wouldn't mind going for a trot down the dunes tonight! It does grow tiresome, this being shut up all day. I wish to goodness I was free like yourself, Madame Ostrich!"

"And if you were free and had to brave the dangers and discomforts of the wilds, you would soon wish you were safe back in the corral," declared Mrs. Ostrich, and chuckled. "You may not believe it, but husband and I are thinking of giving ourselves up as captives after the eggs are hatched. Really, my dear, you have no idea how warm it is with all these plumes on. All of you on the farm are cool and comfortable with just your summer coat, and we who wander in the wilds at our will are roasting to death. But, as grandfather used to say, every bird wishes to be where it isn't. Likely that is why we ostriches are such roamers. No matter where an ostrich happens to be he wants to go somewhere else."

"Well, maybe that is so," replied Mrs. Ostrich, you would, thoughtfully. "Come to think of it, it must be pretty hard for you wild ones sometimes. You never know just where you are going to find your next meal or who is coming along to make things unpleasant for you. While we with in the corral are safe from all harm and know to a second when we are to eat, and as for ever falling ill—we hardly ever do—we are too well taken care of. But, speaking of plumes, The Two-Legs are cutting today, you know. As you see, mine are gone. It feels so good afterward. I wish I had that old stocking treatment. you would not mind hiding them among your feathers—those that you have left are plenty long enough to shield them so that they shall have a close view of what is going on."

"Glad to do it! Glad to do it!" declared her friend. "Come on now, Bobolinks, over the fence and on my back, and you shall see something worth while."

In less time than it takes to tell it we had swapped steel good afterword, and the sight of that old stocking treatment. If I wasn't in a little pen I know I

Another time, in the same lake, the dog was left behind, but instead of swimming toward our island, he went first to another one. The explanation was that we had been building a cabin that day, and a man on the other island had also been building something. Evidently the dog let himself be guided partly by his hearing, and when he heard hammering, he said to himself: "Over yonder doesn't seem like the right direction, but there's the noise, so it must be the place." However, when he got there and discovered his error, he promptly started off in exactly the right direction.

A newspaper story appeared in 1924 about a dog reported to have traveled from Wolcott, Ind., to Silverton, Ore. I had half doubted the story, and wrote to the postmaster at Silverton for confirmation. Mr. R. G. Allen, the postmaster, wrote back: "The story is true. I have known the family for years, and could also recognize the dog any place on account of some injuries he received when a pup."

An anonymous writer in the Saturday Evening Post, a few years ago, told of what he regarded as the classic American case of the homing instinct. That of a dog known as Old Seminoles, once owned by a fox hunter, Judge C. Floyd Hough, of Hot Springs, Ark. On a November day in 1912, at Crab Orchard, Ky., Old Seminoles, along with other hunters, was set upon a fox trail. The other dogs returned that morning, but when night came Old Seminoles was still missing. She had been brought to Kentucky by train and was about 600 miles from home. She was given up as lost. Her owner posted circulars, and advertised in newspapers, offering a reward for her return, but nothing was heard of her until more than two months later, when she came limping into her old home in Arkansas. She was barely able to walk. To reach her home she had had to cross the Mississippi river, the Arkansas river, White river, as well as many lesser streams, and in the dead of winter.

Ned Hewitt, of Germantown Park, New York City, told me of a dog belonging to friends of his, who spent a summer in the Catskills. On the way back to their home in New York the dog became separated from them in New Jersey. They gave him up as lost. The next day the dog appeared at their door. He had had to swim the river, or else had contrived to take the proper ferry, and then had to make his way across the perilous streets of the metropolis with all the countless distractions and conflicting sidewalk odors that

How to Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

Naturally, there is the impression in the United States that American women are the most beautiful in the world. But are they?

The woman best qualified to answer the question, Mme. Helena Rubinstein, internationally noted authority on cultivation and preservation of beauty, does so in a series of articles in which she compares the beauty characteristics of American women with those of foreign women, and sums up the beauty secrets of all countries.

Beauty's Fundamentals Are Universal

Humans are so constituted that frequently what is beauty to one is ugliness to another. Nevertheless, there are certain fundamentals of loveliness that are universal in their appreciation.

The Norse beauty is fair haired and blue eyed, the Latin beauty has great black eyes and skin as dark as her northern cousin's is fair. But for them all, Norse, Celt, Latin or Slav, there are rules of loveliness that were old when Michael Angelo was yet unborn. Time has not changed them—nor will custom vary their acceptance.

Youth is not an essential of beauty. Youthfulness at every age, yes, but the youth of few years is neither an asset nor a liability to loveliness. It is no more than a state of being, an atmosphere to which we must bring beauty!

A pretty complexion, bright eyes, lustrous hair, all of these are the undeniable beauty requisites, and all of these apply as well to the women of one nation as to another.

The shape of the face can vary from the heart-shaped, plump form of the French beauty to the broad oval of the Scandinavian, but if the contour is clear cut and firm, with no sign of drooping muscles, or sagging chin, there will be beauty in each of them.

Those who travel widely inevitably notice the tremendous differences in racial types and racial beauties. Undoubtedly there are certain racial types that are completely representative of a particular nation or country. There is an English skin, a French skin, an Italian skin, a Scandinavian skin, and so on, each differing in its aspect, its care and its treatment. Why this should be so, I am going to tell you.

In this great country, affected by all sorts of climates, we have distinct sectional types of beauty. We have a great coastal area, and in it we find a type of beauty not unlike that brought about by the same climatic conditions in England, Italy, France and Algiers. The beauty problems of the women of New England coastal states, New York, southern coastal states, etc., are much the same as those of women of England.

Adhesions.
"Will a pain in the side that comes from deep breathing caused from adhesions due to a former case of plural tuberculosis, eventually leave? An X-ray has shown that all tuberculosis is gone."

"For the benefit of those ambitious diet fans, I will add that this plural tuberculosis that I had came from dieting too strenuously to reduce and too much golf, tennis, and swimming at the same time. Since then I've tried your way and feel fine and am normal weight."

Apparently the development of adhesions is more or less an individual question.

Dr. Susan Offutt, of the Mayo clinic, tells me that it is the experience at the clinic that some persons seem to develop adhesions from slight inflammations and minor operations, while others do not, even after graver inflammations.

To help prevent the formation of adhesions, it is now the practice among surgeons to have their patients change their positions and have some form of passive exercise, and perhaps some form of active exercise, before they are out of bed. Then the gradual active exercises are given.

Occasionally, adhesions are of such a nature that an operation has to be performed to release them, but the majority used to the slight inconvenience, which may lessen.

Beef pot roast is a good sound dish to serve to your family, winter or summer. It insures well cooked meat which is delicious, hot or cold. There is always plenty of good brown gravy if the pot roast is properly cooked.

Today's Recipes

New England Pot Roast—The average pot roast is seared first and then simmered until tender, but this recipe works the other way about. Get a piece of bottom round about two and one-half pounds, put in a covered kettle with one cup of water and about three tablespoonsful of minced onion. Allow to cook at a gentle boil for two hours, being careful not to allow it to boil dry, but at the same time not using too much water. After it has cooked two hours, remove the cover and add two teaspoons of salt and boil briskly until the water has evaporated, then brown the meat well in the suet in the bottom of the kettle. Remove the meat, add two tablespoons of flour to the fat in the kettle, blend and add two cups of water, cook until thick and smooth and serve.

Strawberry Trifle—Dip squares of sponge cake in orange juice and cover with partly crushed, sweetened strawberries.

SUGGESTIONS

Hurrying the Ironing
When in a hurry to iron dry clothes sprinkle them with very hot water or use cold water and wrap them in a bath towel, placing them in a moderately hot oven. In either case they will be ready for the iron within half an hour.

Saves the Washboard
Take a piece of rubber inner tube, smooth side down, on each side of the washboard on a line with the top of the wash tub. It prevents rubbing the wood away on the board and it stays where it is put.

As long as you take cathartics, Mrs. K., you will never have natural movements. You must remember that after stopping their use, it may be three or four days before there is a natural movement, and during that time you had better take small enemias. Don't be worried about it.

Behind The Scenes in Houston, Texas

By CHARLES P. STEWART

HOUSTON, June 27.—Senator Jim Reed of Missouri is the most picturesque figure at Houston.

Al Smith isn't here in person. He isn't Jim's type of an old viking, anyway. His may be the most magnetic personality on earth. Nobody disputes his prowess as a fighter. But granting him every other quality you please, he hasn't the beserk style of Senator Jim.

Reed simply hasn't an equal in his particular line. Others doubt, less have lines just as good, but they're not the same.

Jim scuttled his ship as he went into this scrap. If he doesn't capture the presidential ship, his own will go down under him.

He passed up a renomination to the senate, which he could have had just as well as not, declaring he means to be president or he means to talk him out of it, pointing out to him that his senatorship would be a mighty nice thing for him to have as a life preserver, if worst came to worst—and he wouldn't be stopped from fighting for the presidency in the meantime.

No, sir—that would be halfway work—none of it for Reed.

He gave up the home he has occupied in Washington for nearly 18 years, saying he'd be moving into the White House next—or going back to K. C.

Nerve!

Reed appears at Houston as a

warrior pledged to conquer or perish.

He looks the part, too — this grim old man, approaching 70, with his white hair and iron visage—his flaming eye and his pitiless lips—his unmistakable expression of, "No quarter given or asked!"

On a recent speaking tour of the southwest, Jim had occasion to pay his respects—and precious few of 'em—to a senator from the town in which he happened to be making an address, and one of this senator's friends arose in the audience and said, "Say that to his face!"

It was the funniest thing that's likely to occur this campaign — such a remark to Jim Reed, who'd kick a raging lion in the slats and pull his wool and slap his choos and take a fresh grip on his unlighted cigar and proceed calmly on his way.

There'd be no foul ticktacks in the battle Senator Reed puts up. He hasn't it in him. But it won't be ladylike.

There was some surprise at the mildness of his tone, in his implied references to his leading rival, for awhile after he announced himself. There isn't any now. Seemingly the senator was just winding himself up. He did it good. No afraid of lions?—no, nor tigers, either, judging from some of the latest of his utterances.

He may be slain, but he won't be beaten, and the Houston victor will know he's been in a muss.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

Looking Ahead

I wonder how many of the girls who now write me to bemoan the fact that their boy friends are cool, will, 10 years from now, remember the pang of love they are suffering. "Why do girls have to suffer the pangs of regret when our boy friends act so cool?" queries one damsel, and the boys who can't win the girl they want, echo the question, reversing the order of the sexes. Well, you know children make a terrible fuss sometimes when their parents deny them things they want, and which, if they got, would make them ill. Maybe it's that way with us, whether we're loveliest young people or older people who want things. Maybe if we got them we would find they were not what we wanted at all, and we would be unhappier than ever.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I'm very deeply in love with a young man two years my junior. (I am 19). At times he seems to care a little, again he seems so cool and indifferent. Why do girls have to suffer the pangs of regret when our boy friends act so cool? Mrs. Lee, please tell me how I can win his love, as I love him."

"A SAD EYED BLOND."
Why, dear, a boy of 17 could hardly be expected to be very steadfast in his affections, and it would be bad if he was. He probably likes you as well as possibly better—than any of his other girl friends, and the kindest thing you can do is to continue to be friendly, but to leave him free to choose.

Haven't got G. W. C.'s address. Lonesome, and must remind you that I don't give addresses through the column.

Seventeen and a half is not too young to have boy friends, "One Willing to Be Told," if you choose nice boys. You are correct about the "petting."

Some time ago I answered a letter from a young man who signed himself "Jim." He said he had broken his engagement to a young lady who wrote me to tell him that she had not always been "good." I told him it was all right to break the engagement, feeling as he did, but I wondered if cases have been reversed whether he would have thought her justified in breaking with him, and I also commended her courage in confessing. One of our readers disagrees with my answer and writes as follows. In parentheses I would say that I always welcome these letters of dissent.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I think you are a little hard on the boy who signed himself 'Jim.' I am in something like Jim's place. Ten years ago I divorced my husband. I got the four minor children. I forgave my husband fully and wish him all success, even another wife, if he will be worthy of her. But I can never trust him again or respect him. All true love must have respect and admiration as well as sex appeal. I can forgive, but I cannot forget. I hope we may never meet again. I offered to let my oldest son—now of age—go to his father for a visit or to stay, if he chose. The boy, however, chose to stay with me. "DISILLUSIONED."

To some it is given to love greatly even though the object of such love be unworthy; others, like yourself, demand respect and admiration before they can love. It is not for me to say which is the greater love. We have to make our decisions according to our own natures—our own codes. Your letter also raises one more the question of what forgiveness means. For myself, when I cannot forget an offense against myself, I feel I have not truly forgiven. But, of course, this "forgetting" is not an entire blotting out of the fault. That is part of the penalty one must pay for transgressing. There is always—no matter how hard one tries to blot it out—a certain suspicion left, way back in one's mind, that will assert itself sometimes.

Inside the Fence and Out

"Hello, friend," came a low, choky whisper. "I was expecting you. How are things among the sand hills? I wouldn't mind going for a trot down the dunes to-night! It does grow tiresome this goodness I was free like yourself, goodness Ostrich."

"And if you were free and had to brave the dangers and discomforts of the wilds you would soon wish you were safe back in the corral," declared Mrs. Ostrich, and chuckled. "You may not believe it, but husband and I are thinking of giving ourselves up as captives after the eggs are hatched. Really, my dear, you have no idea how warm it is with all these plumes on. All of you on the farm are cozy and comfortable with just your summer coat, and we who wander in the wilds at our will are roasting to death. But, as grandfather used to say, every bird wishes to be where it isn't. Likely that is why we ostriches are such warmers. No matter where an ostrich happens to be he wants to go somewhere else."

"Well, maybe that is so," replied Mrs. Ostrich's friend, thoughtfully. "Come to think of it, we have a hard time for you wild ones sometimes. You never know just where you are going to find your next meal or who is coming along to make things unpleasant for you. While we with in the corral are safe from all harm and know to a second when we are to eat, and as for ever falling ill—we hardly ever do—we are too well taken care of. But, speaking of plumes, the Two-Legs are cutting today, you know. As you see, mine are gone. It feels good after that, but do take care that old stocking treatment. I wasn't in a little pen I know I should kick! "Am I too late to see the cutting?" Asked Mrs. Ostrich, eagerly. "That is what I ran over for. I have brought two little friends along. Meet Mr. and Mrs. Bobolink from North America. I shall have to watch from afar, but they are so tiny that perhaps you would not mind hiding them among your feathers—those that you have left are plenty long enough to shield them so that they shall have a close view of what is going on."

"Glad to do it! Glad to do it!" declared Mrs. Ostrich. "Come on now, Bobolinks, over the fence and on my back, and you shall see something worth while."

In less time than it takes to tell it we had swapped stock and were off to see the sights of the corral.

COUNTY FAIR PREMIUM LISTS WILL EXCEED $10,000 THIS YEAR

The premium lists for the eighty-ninth annual Greene County Fair, the dates of which are July 31, August 1, 2 and 3, total more than $10,000, an increase over last year, it is announced by officials of the Greene County Agricultural Society.

Premiums last year totalled $9,365.45, including $894.95 for Boys and Girls' Club work and $615 in range awards.

Purses for the three-day race meet total $4,700, an increase of $1,300 because of four stake races for purses aggregating $3,000, entries for which have closed.

The opening day's program, Wednesday, August 1, includes a 2:22 pace for $300 purse; three-year-old and under, a $500 stake race; and the 2:14 pace, a $1,000 stake race.

The Thursday card offers a 2:22 trot for $300 purse; the three-year-old and under, a $500 stake event for colts; and a 2:14 trot for $400 purse.

The meet closes Friday with the 2:18 trot, a stake race for $1,000; a 2:18 pace for a $300 purse, and a free-for-all pace for $400 purse.

Four Xenia merchants are offering loving cups to be presented the winners in four events, the 2:14 pacing stake, the three-year-old trot, the three-year-old pace and the 2:18 trot.

Entries for the stake races have long since closed with the cards full. The entries for the remaining events close July 26.

One of the outstanding features of the fair will be the annual livestock parade to take place before the grand stand at 12 o'clock noon Friday, August 3. The parade is open to live stock exhibitors, Boys' and Girls' Clubs and other organizations.

Prizes totalling $55 will be awarded for beef bred displays, dairy bred displays and organization floats.

In addition to offers of local merchants, the Greene County Agricultural Society will award $900 in prizes in the Boys' and Girls' 4-H Club exhibits.

Since there will be fourteen organized clothing clubs and six food clubs in the county this year, the fair exhibits will be judged on a club basis in order to give a more uniform distribution of prizes. Each organized club will compete with members of its own club only, for prizes totalling $10.50, which includes all four years' work.

The fair board also offers special premiums aggregating $440 for the best general display of agricultural and horticultural products exhibited by the granges of Greene County.

The usual inter-county quilt tournament will be held Wednesday and Thursday, August 1 and 2 at the fair, commencing each day at 10 a. m. Any organized quilt club is eligible to compete.

The purse will be divided into three money prizes, $12.50, second, $7.50 and third, $5. Entries and inquiries should be addressed to J. E. Hughes, president, care of the Xenia Quilt Club.

ENTHUSIASM MARKS BOOSTER BANQUET FOR HOME-COMING

Company is coming. More than 3,000 invitations have already been issued and responses are being received by the score. There may be approximately 30,000 people present. The party covers a period from August 26-29. Elaborate entertainment is planned for the guests. Everything must be spic and span to receive the visitors.

In these words Edwin Galloway, chairman of the decoration committee, told the more than 150 people who attended the "booster banquet" sponsored by the executive committee of the Greene County Home-Coming Association at the Elks' Club Tuesday night, that Xenia must make preparations on a gigantic scale for the August celebration.

Mr. Galloway, obtained as the chief speaker at the meeting, which was held to give impetus to the Home-Coming plans, created great enthusiasm.

He reviewed the steps which led up to a decision to hold the Home-Coming this year, the twentieth anniversary of the first event of its kind held here in 1908.

Mr. Galloway pointed out that the present modern facilities of transportation, thousands of people will be in Xenia during the four-day celebration and that the city must be dressed up in its "Sunday best" in order to present an attractive appearance.

The speaker enumerated the changes that have taken place in Xenia in the last twenty years, how the city has been progressing rapidly and how the old landmarks are disappearing.

He urged the citizens to co-operate extensively with Home-Coming officials in making the celebration a success.

Following Mr. Galloway's talk, T. H. Zell, chairman of the executive committee, who presided, called upon various others for brief talks.

Dr. A. C. Messenger, chairman of the program committee, Dr. B. R. McClellan, chairman of the committee on clubs and organizations, J. R. Kimber, county farm agent, Isadore Hyman, president of the Downtown Country Club, and Sheriff Ohmer Tate, representing J. P. Moody Post, American Legion, explained the program of entertainment being arranged for the four days.

Dr. W. A. Galloway, chairman of the historical committee, explained details of the historical exhibit which will be on display at the Masonic Temple, probably all that week. He pointed out that this year is the one hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of Xenia.

Dr. Galloway expressed the hope that several representatives of the Ohio State Archaeological and Historical Society, including C. B. Galloway, secretary, editor and librarian, may be obtained to give an intelligent explanation of the exhibit of relics, which will be representative of all periods from the mound builders to the present day.

Another feature from a historical point of view, will be an exact reproduction of the earliest pioneer church service held here in 1803. It was a Catholic service, he revealed.

John W. Prugh, as chairman of the finance committee, in a brief talk, expressed optimism that the funds for financing the Home-Coming will be raised without difficulty. He declared the total cost, including the erection of an auditorium, would be around $12,000.

Exclusive of the community house, Xenia will be asked to raise between $3,500 and $4,000 or actual Home-Coming expenses. While revealing no definite plans for obtaining the money, the chairman asserted that voluntary contributions will first be asked.

H. L. Binder, president of the Xenia Retail Merchants' Association, the final speaker on the program, promised the support of business men of the city in raising the needed amount.

The banquet was attended by members of the Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs, the Xenia Business and Professional Women's Club, the Downtown Country Club and other organizations.

Group singing with piano accompaniment by Miss Mary E. McDonnell, preceded the speaking program. The banquet was served by Jacob Kany.

MOVIE THEATERS TO BE OPENED SUNDAY; FEATURES OFFERED

Sunday motion picture shows are in store for Xenia, beginning Sunday, July 1, according to a joint announcement Wednesday by J. T. Hibbert, owner of the Bijou Theater, and H. L. Binder, proprietor of the Orpheum Theater.

Yielding to popular demand, the two local theaters will have regular matinee and evening shows in the future every Sunday, providing patronage warrants.

The theater owners point out that this will provide fifty-two extra pictures every year and enable them to obtain more recent film releases and a greater variety of pictures.

The feature film for the opening Sunday show at the Bijou Theater July 1 is "Happiness Ahead," starring Colleen Moore, a First National picture which was only released last Sunday.

The picture was produced by John McCormick, written especially for Miss Moore by Edmund Goulding and scenarized by Benjamin Glazer. William A. Seiter directed the production, with a supporting cast including Edmund Lowe, Lilyan Tashman, Edythe Chapman, Charles Sellon, Arthur Housman and Diane Ellis.

A two-reel feature will also be shown, entitled "The Blue Boy," suggested by Sir Thomas Gainsborough's famous painting and photographed by the Technicolor process.

The cast includes John Riche and Philippe De Lacy. The picture, "The Blue Boy," which furnishes the inspiration for "The Blue Boy," was considered the most unique and artistic work of the celebrated artist, Thomas Gainsborough. Henry E. Huntington, nationally known financier and art lover of Pasadena, Calif., purchased the original for $72,000 from a private collection in England. A striking story has been woven about the "blue boy" depicted on canvas.

At the Orpheum Theater, the first Sunday feature will be a super-spectacle, "The Moon of Israel," starring Maria Corda and Arlette Marchal with a cast of 50,000 people.

The story is an adaptation of the novel by Sir Rider Haggard and is said to be probably one of the finest love stories ever brought to the screen. The theme is the romance between an Israelite slave girl and the Prince of Egypt, a romance that begins on the Egyptian desert and carries the little slave-girl to the throne of the greatest kingdom in the world. The film has some of the most tremendous scenes ever filmed. A two-reel comedy will also be shown.

JACK QUINN

John Quinn Picus was born in Hazleton, Pa., July 5, 1885. Jack Quinn, as he is known in baseball, is the oldest pitching star in the big leagues, this being his twenty-fifth season in baseball.

In 1903, years before some of his fellow major league stars were born, Quinn broke in with Connellsville of the Pennsylvania State league.

From Connellsville Jack went to Macon, Ga., in the Sally, and then to Richmond, Va., in the Virginia league. The New York Yanks grabbed him in 1909. Quinn passed from the majors in 1912, came back with Boston in 1913, and again with Chicago in 1918. From Chicago he went to New York again, then Boston and is now a star with the Philadelphia Athletics.

J. B. GRISWOLD TELLS HIS STORY

I have been sick with rheumatism and kidney trouble for a long time, and for the last three years have doctored with every kind of medicine that I would hear about, but nothing seemed to do me any good. I tried Ju-Vo Herb Tonic and have had wonderful results. I have taken one bottle and am now on my second bottle and feel better than I have felt for a long time.

Ju-Vo Herb Tonic has done me more good than all the rest of the medicine I have taken put together. I am mighty glad to recommend Ju-Vo—J. B. Griswold, 4 Maple St., Hamilton, Ohio.

If you are sick and discouraged, don't give up. Hasten to your druggist and purchase a bottle of Ju-Vo Herb Tonic that remarkable medicine made from herbs, barks, roots and berries.

FINED AND DRIVING RIGHTS SUSPENDED

William LaFong, 24 Belmont, charged with operating an auto while intoxicated, was found guilty by Probate Judge S. C. Wright, who imposed a fine of $100 and costs and ordered his right to drive a car suspended for six months Wednesday morning.

LaFong was also convicted of two charges of driving with improper lights and was fined $5 on each charge. It was claimed his auto was not equipped with headlights or a tail light.

He was arrested on the Dayton Pike June 16 by O. H. Cornwell, county road patrolman.

ENTHUSIASM MARKS BOOSTER BANQUET FOR HOME-COMING

Company is coming. More than 3,000 invitations have already been issued and responses are being received by the score. There may be approximately 30,000 people present. The party covers a period from August 26-29. Elaborate entertainment is planned for the guests. Everything must be spic and span to receive the visitors.

In these words Edwin Galloway, chairman of the Home-Coming committee, told the more than 150 people who attended the "booster banquet" sponsored by the executive committee of the Greene County Home-Coming Association at the Elks' Club Tuesday night.

Mr. Galloway, obtained as the chief speaker at the meeting, which was held to give impetus to the Home-Coming plans, created great enthusiasm.

He reviewed the steps which led up to a decision to hold the Home-Coming this year, the twentieth anniversary of the first event of its kind held here in 1908.

Mr. Galloway pointed out that the Home-Coming is not a mere party, but a celebration of the past and a plan for the future.

He urged the citizens to cooperate extensively with Home-Coming officials in making the celebration a success.

Following Mr. Galloway's talk, T. H. Zell, chairman of the executive committee, who presided, directed upon various others for brief talks.

Dr. A. C. Messinger, chairman of the program committee, Dr. B. R. McClellan, chairman of the committee on clubs and organizations, J. R. Kimber, county farm agent, Isadore Hyman, president of the Downtown Country Club, and Sheriff Ohmer Tate, representing J. P. Poody Post, American Legion, explained the program of entertainment being arranged for the four days.

Dr. W. A. Galloway, chairman of the historical committee, explained the purpose of the historical exhibit which will be on display at the Masonic Temple, probably all that week. He pointed out that this year is the one hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of Xenia.

Dr. Galloway expressed the hope that several representatives of the Ohio State Archaeological and Historical Society, including C. B. Galbreath, secretary, editor and librarian, may be obtained to give an intelligent explanation of the exhibit of relics, which will be representative of all periods from the mound builders to the present day.

Another feature from a historical point of view, will be an exact reproduction of the earliest pioneer church service held here in 1803. It was a Catholic service, he revealed.

John W. Prugh, as chairman of the finance committee, in a brief talk, expressed optimism that the funds for financing the Home-Coming will be raised without difficulty. He declared the total cost, including the erection of an auditorium, would be around $12,000.

Excluding the cost of the community house, Xenia will be asked to raise between $3,500 and $4,000 or actual Home-Coming expenses. While revealing no definite plans for obtaining the money, the chairman asserted that voluntary contributions will first be asked.

H. L. Bieder, president of the Xenia Retail Merchants' Association, the final speaker on the program, promised the support of business men of the city in raising the needed amount.

The banquet was attended by members of the Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs, the Xenia Business and Professional Women's Club, the Downtown Country Club and other organizations.

Group singing with piano accompaniment by Miss Mary E. McDonnell, preceded the speaking program. The banquet was served by Jacob Kany.

MOVIE THEATERS TO BE OPENED SUNDAY; FEATURES OFFERED

Sunday motion picture shows are in store for Xenia, beginning Sunday, July 1, according to a joint announcement Wednesday by J. T. Hibbert, owner of the Bijou Theater, and H. L. Bieder, proprietor of the Orpheum Theater.

Yielding to popular demand, the two local theaters will have regular matinee and evening shows in the future every Sunday, providing patronage warrants.

The theater owners point out that this will provide fifty-two extra pictures every year and enable them to obtain more recent film releases and a greater variety of pictures.

The feature film for the opening Sunday show at the Bijou Theater July 1 is "Diogenes Ahead," starring Colleen Moore, a First National picture which was only released last Sunday.

The picture was produced by John McCormick, written especially for Miss Moore by Edmund Goulding and scenarized by Benjamin Glazer. William A. Seiter directed the production with a supporting cast including Edmund Lowe, Lilyan Tashman, Elythe Chapman, Charles Sellon, Arthur Housman and Diane Ellis.

A two-reel feature will also be shown entitled "The Blue Boy," suggested by Sir Thomas Gainsborough's famous painting and photographed by the Technicolor process.

The cast includes John Riche and Philippe de Lacy. The master piece, "The Blue Boy," which furnishes the inspiration for "The Blue Boy," was considered the most unique and artistic work of the celebrated artist, Thomas Gainsborough. Henry E. Huntington, nationally known financier and art lover of Pasadena, Calif., purchased the original for $728,000 from a private collection in England. A striking story has been woven about the "blue boy" depicted on canvas.

At the Orpheum Theater, the first Sunday feature will be a super-spectacle, "The Moon of Israel," starring Maria Corda and Arlette Marchal with a cast of 50,000 people.

The story is an adaptation of the novel by Sir Rider Haggard and is said to be probably one of the finest love stories ever brought to the screen. The theme is the romance between an Israelite slave girl and the Prince of Egypt, a romance that begins on the Egyptian desert and carries the little slave girl to the throne of the greatest kingdom in the world.

The film has some of the most tremendous scenes ever filmed. A two-reel comedy will also be shown.

The Lang Chevrolet Co. retained first place in the American Softball League by a scant margin of half a game when its scheduled game with the second-place Hudson Essex nine was postponed on account of rain Tuesday night.

Bad weather has played havoc with the schedule in the American League this season.

The Firemen, at present tied for leadership of the National League, will meet the last-place Phi Delta Kappa Fraternity team in a National League contest Wednesday night.

BOWERS SCORES RULE OF "PRIVILEGE AND FILLAGE" IN SPEECH

nation's property and the nation's honor. We submit in no spirit of political floundering that it is a shocking thing that we have waited vainly for seven years for one word, one syllable, one whisper of the widest criticism of those crimes and criminals to come from a single representative of the administration.

"They heard La Follett's denunciation of Teapot Dome—and were silent. They saw the various processes in the administration of the nation's property and were silent. They heard the gossip of the capital that buzzed for weeks and months—and were silent. There was not a man among them with enough will power, or lung power, to blow a police whistle.

"Sometimes silence is golden—for the thief.

Why, he demanded, were the leaders of the administration silent, and he answered his own question thus: "Because of the organization of the party men was a beneficiary of the crime."

"We see," he went on ironically, "the erstwhile chairman of the national committee of the regime in power laying aside his duties as an elder in the church to sink in to the office of Sinclair to get him snatched bonds. We see him sneaking about like a receiver of stolen goods to men of means to persuade them dishonestly to contribute these to the party fund under cover."

"We see him sending a portion of these bonds to the dictator of the administration, affectionately known as 'Andy,' and thus we know that the high functionaries of the state knew that the party was to be made a beneficiary of the crime.

"And thus the campaign debts of the regime in power have been paid by Harry Sinclair, and now with plums plaudits, and now other campaign free from debt—because there was a Teapot Dome."

As for the Democrats, Bowers declared, "We put no legislation on the auction block. No Harry Sinclair has paid our debts, we are free. We unfurl the Jeffersonian banner: 'A good government is an honest government, and we invite all enemies of corruption to fight with us beneath its folds for the redemption of the violated honor of the republic between the Republicans and Democrats this year, Bowers declared, goes back to the very fundamentals of government—the question of whether the Hamiltonian philosophy 'government for wealth and privilege' or the Jeffersonian concept of 'equal rights' shall prevail for the next four years.

It was in this connection that he dwelt on the controversial question of agricultural relief. He asserted that for eight years "big business" as represented by highly protected corporations had profited enormously while unprotected agriculture had languished and sickened.

"Thus," he said, "while the little group represented by Mr. Mellon has found fine plucking in the vineyard of the state, there has been nothing left but thorns and thistles for the tillers of the soil."

He declared there has been a thirty billion dollar depreciation in the value of farm property in the last eight years, and "two million farmers have been driven from the paternal acres within the year."

"The result is a disgrace to our civilization."

"When business profits from legislation," he asserted, "it is described as 'patriotic statesmanship'; when the farmer demands his share 'they denounce him as a radical and a crank.'"

One day the head of the state by a scratch of the pen increased the tariff load of the pig iron industry by 50 per cent, and the next day he delivered a homily to the farmers on the wickedness of expecting profit from a governmental act.

The Democrats, he said, "do not ask paternalistic privilege for the farmer but we do demand that the hand of privilege be taken from the farmers' pockets and off the farmers' throats. We do not propose that the most basic of all our industries shall longer be a doormat for all the others to wipe their feet on as they enter the temple of privilege."

chairman and his first act was to make a forced plea to the delegates not to repeat the great blunder at Madison Square Garden.

"United we can win," was the burden of his speech. It reflected the sober, contemplative judgment of a majority of the Democratic leaders who are determined here that there shall be no division over the only real controversy that besets this convention—prohibition.

"Neither is it an anti-prohibition party," Democrats have always divided on the question of prohibition.

In this situation, he declared, the sensible thing for the Democrats to do is to "demonstrate their willingness to enter into honorable compromises and to make personal sacrifices."

"Otherwise," he said, "the opportunity which is auspicious—the opportunity for victory—will be wasted."

Senator Robinson said in part: "The Democratic party has a mission which has not materially changed since the days of Jefferson. The necessity for political reform is greater now than ever before. Our party, from its birth, has safeguarded the rights of the masses. It has championed personal liberty and opposed centralization. Jefferson sought to protect the usefulness against the employment of laws and government agencies for private profit.

"Jackson aroused the public to the menace of plutocracy. Cleveland on the taxing power to enforce favored groups by the ex-fiscation of the masses. Wilson defined anew the Democratic ideals of justice and equality."

"In this campaign the Republicans cunningly seek to raise false issues through which to win their way back into public favor."

"The national administration during the last seven years is indefensible from any standpoint. For corruption and inefficiency it is paralleled only by the disgraceful prostitution of power in states dominated by the Republican party. The assertion of our opponents that the Democratic party cannot be trusted to promote sound business is totally false. The Democratic party has at no time interfered with lawful enterprises. It is the defender of legitimate business. What was established commerce favorably with the eight years of the Wilson administration?

"The boldest champion of the opposition cannot recall another time when prosperity was more general. Labor was profitably employed; industry full time; agriculture was on an equality with other businesses."

"The prosperity of the present by no means equals that under Democratic control."

"The acts on the whole do not justify the boast in the Kansas City platform."

"The secretary of the treasury admits in his annual report for 1927 that conditions during that year were worse than in 1926."

"The president's industrial conference board asserts that business prosperity in the United States is confined to giant corporations. The bureau of foreign and domestic commerce examined one hundred thousand concerns in 1927 and reported thirty-four thousand of them earning no profits whatever."

"The commissioner of internal revenue states that only three-fifths of the corporations manufacturing textiles and the same percentage of corporations manufacturing leather products reported net incomes for 1925."

"The record of commercial and bank failures reflects the 'falsity' of this claim of exceptional prosperity."

"In 1919, only fifty state banks and four national banks failed with aggregate liabilities of less than $12,000,000; in 1925 three hundred and sixty-one state banks and one hundred and three national banks with total liabilities of $175,000,000 passed in receiverships. Note the figures for 1926: Seven hundred and seventy-two banks failed with liabilities of $266,000,000.

"What are the facts with respect to commercial failures? There were 29 per cent more in 1927 than in the previous year."

"Annual farm products decreased more than $1,500,000,000, comparing 1924 with 1927."

"The bureau of labor statistics reveal a 20 per cent decrease now in employment over 1927."

"The depressed condition of agriculture is of common knowledge. This, the greatest of all industries, has been steadily declining since the Republican party initiated its policy of deflation in 1921. Every one knows that agriculture has been going backward since Wilson's administration ended. Never before has there existed such discontent among farm producers. They attribute their distressed condition to the policies of the Republican party. Why should farmers be compelled to sell their products in the open markets of the world and to buy from trusts and monopolies which arbitrarily fix the prices of their commodities—an unjust and oppressive system animated by excessive tariff duties? The importance of this fact is emphasized by the repeated refusal of the Republican party to grant substantial relief. The farmers of the nation are awake to the issue. They are ready, if afforded the opportunity, to safeguard their own interest through political action."

"The Republican party has been deceiving the farmers of the United States and now seeks again to deceive them with new false promises. The only specific measure for farm relief pledged by the Kansas City platform is increased tariff duties which experts show cannot be effective."

"The economic equality of agriculture with other industries may be possible by reducing the tariff on manufactured articles consumed by farmers; by a system of export duties; or by the adoption of the principle of the McNary-Haagen bill. Such equality can never be established by merely raising the tariff on imports of agricultural products which are grown in substantial surplus above domestic requirements."

"This convention should invite support from farmers by declaring adherence to these principles."

CHAPTER XIX
When heavy blue eyes opened they rested on her mother, standing beside the bed with a tray.

"I didn't have the heart to wake you before, Stella. You were sleeping so soundly."

"What time is it?"

"The noon whistle just blew."

Stella sat up. "But mother—when the Age came, and we realized what you'd been through, we both would've been better off. Your father was awake until after one, so we knew you weren't in then. It's pretty bad, those attacks. I don't know what we're coming to."

"It's awful," Stella sighed her coffee. "We stepped the presses. I wrote the piece in the Age." She'd have to think quickly.

"A man called up, Stella. A little after eleven."

"He seemed anxious to get in touch with you. He—"

"He wouldn't give his name. Boston call."

It was rather awkward. Mrs. Bagoz moved about the room, raising curtains and putting things to rights. Stella sensed anxiety, and hesitant questions, Stella decided on activity as the best defense.

"I wonder if father could let me have the Ford."

"Why I suppose so. But must you dash right out again, dear? Don't you think you'd better rest? Your father's been rather hoping for a chance to show you something of what he's been doing about the place. But he wouldn't say anything. You know how he is. Unless you showed interest."

"I can't, mother. Not now, while all this is going on. My place is right in it." She tried to smile reassuringly. She must appear mistress of herself. Above all, she must get away from the house. She couldn't think here. And Ernest might call her again and talk in a way she couldn't meet with complicated evasions. "You see, Mother, the best way to work over the background for my article seemed to be to go right to work on the Age. So that's what I'm doing. I'll be over the place tomorrow. It will be nice to have a good visit with father. He's such a dear!"

There wasn't quite the ring of sincerity in her voice that she meant it to have. But she couldn't help that. She dressed hurriedly, and as she did so, Mrs. Bagoz moved in and out of the room, ever on the brink of questioning. She was down in the front hall, putting on her hat, when the most pressing of those questions finally slipped out. "You don't want to tell me who the man is, dear?"

"The man? Oh, that Boston call? It must have been one of the New York folks. There was some talk of our getting together today. But of course I didn't know then what I was being drawn into here."

"So?" Stella contrived a smile. "Dear—"

"Dear—"

"I can't help wondering about your life down in New York."

"It's a busy life. Mumsie, dear. And a good deal healthier than you seem to think."

"Oh, it isn't that I doubt you."

Stella kissed her and fled. She found her father greasing the Ford, and greeted him cheerily.

"It's pretty bad about Homer Pew," he remarked.

"They almost killed him?"

"Did you see him?"

"Yes. I went right out there from the Age office."

Oh, Father, it just occurred to me (thank heaven her mind was active again) this place they call Jazzland must be the old Parmenter place."

"Yes."

"How did the Parmenters come to let them have it?"

"They didn't. That was rather odd. Fred Parmenter died last year, you know."

"When Mary found out what they wanted it for, she refused to sell. It took some courage. Fred didn't leave her any too well fixed. But there was quite a little feeling about it, you know. Mary showed a good deal of courage. She told me she just didn't think it would be good for the town. And she hated to think of the old place going for a road house. Her folks bought it from the Indians, you see, in 1650."

"But if she refused to sell, how did they get it?"

"That was odd. I don't think it

READ THIS FIRST:

Auckland Center, a little old town in New England, is proud of its beauty and traditions. But the modern world crowds in on its peace and quiet. Finally a notorious gang of bootleggers, liquor flows. Girls of the town are lured there. The editor of the "Weekly Age" is murdered for his editorial attacks. His brother, Homer Pew, takes up the fight. Homer is joined by Stella Bagoz, one of the town girls, who has made good as a writer in New York. Stella comes to write a story, and remains in a mysterious midnight attack. Stella takes charge of the paper and writes sizzling editorials. She also tries to trace a telephone call, believing it to come from the murderers. Stella finds her little sister, Martha, has been out on a lark to Jazzland, and has been drinking. She gives her a lecture and Martha complains that she is kept at home while Stella has been allowed to go to college and later take up her own life in New York. Stella returns to her room, and leaves a note pinned on her door telling her mother to awaken her early the next morning.

"I can't help wondering about your life down in New York."

"It's a busy life. Mumsie, dear. And a good deal healthier than you seem to think."

"Oh, it isn't that I doubt you."

Stella kissed her and fled. She found her father greasing the Ford, and greeted him cheerily.

"It's pretty bad about Homer Pew," he remarked.

"They almost killed him?"

"Did you see him?"

"Yes. I went right out there from the Age office."

Oh, Father, it just occurred to me (thank heaven her mind was active again) this place they call Jazzland must be the old Parmenter place."

"Yes."

"How did the Parmenters come to let them have it?"

"They didn't. That was rather odd. Fred Parmenter died last year, you know."

"When Mary found out what they wanted it for, she refused to sell. It took some courage. Fred didn't leave her any too well fixed. But there was quite a little feeling about it, you know. Mary showed a good deal of courage. She told me she just didn't think it would be good for the town. And she hated to think of the old place going for a road house. Her folks bought it from the Indians, you see, in 1650."

"But if she refused to sell, how did they get it?"

"That was odd. I don't think it is understood around town. Mary came over here one evening, before she went south, and told me about it. She felt rather badly. Henry Harker's little farm was next door, you know. He told Mary he wanted to enlarge his place and took a three months' option. Paid five hundred dollars down. Offered it."

"Where did Henry Harker get five hundred dollars?"

"That's the question. Mary didn't know, you see, that he was up against it and in danger of being sold up for taxes. I knew."

"The Jazzland people simply made him their agent, then?"

"I can't say. Apparently somebody did. They bought his property, too."

"Oh! Where is he now?"

"California. He just quietly went away. It was a rather sharp trick. But I suppose Henry just didn't know which way to turn."

Jamestown News

At a recent meeting of the Jamestown board of education, the remainder of the teachers for the coming year were employed: Superintendent, R. E. Correll of Ripley, O.; Miss Pauline Collins of Cedarville, Miss Frances Reeves of this place, for the third and fourth grades. The roster of the high school faculty is Superintendent Correll, Miss Collins, Miss Pudge and Miss Randall. The primary teacher of the Adams St. School is yet to be employed.

Mr. Glenn Bland, clerk in the local Kroger grocery, is now managing the South Charleston store for ten days, while the manager takes a vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Massie of Lima, former residents of Jamestown, have come here to spend the summer with Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Massie.

The Misses Flora Hughes and Phyllis Jones are taking a teachers course of study at Wittenberg College, Springfield. Each one will teach the same schools they did last year. Miss Hughes at Ross Township and Miss Jones at Zaza, Barnes.

On June 24, Mr. and Mrs. John Baughn and daughters, Martha Ann and Margaret Eldora, attended the annual Baughn Home Coming, which was held at the Sugar Creek Baptist Church, near Washington C. H. The occasion also marked the annual "Children's Day" program which occupied the morning of the day.

The order of the afternoon was addresses by different speakers and music, the Misses Baughn being on the program. Margaret Eldora delighted the audience with a vocal solo, "That Wonderful Mother of Mine." She was accompanied by her sister, Martha Ann, on the violin, with her cousin, Miss Goldie Baughn, at the piano. A warm fellowship was enjoyed during this hour of visiting by relatives and friends.

Mr. Bruce Parker of Dayton visited his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Parker on Saturday, before leaving for Lansing, Mich., to spend a week of his two weeks vacation.

On Thursday's morning of the Home Missionary Society of the M. E. Church the annual election of officers was held, resulting in the re-election of those serving last year: president, Mrs. J. J. Barnes; vice-president, Mrs. Homer Smith; secretary, Mrs. W. H. Watson; corresponding secretary, Mrs. R. W. Zimmerman; treasurer, Mrs. E. E. Breakfield.

Stella was taken to the McClellan hospital at Xenia, on Thursday evening, where she underwent an operation for an acute attack of appendicitis.

The Missionary Society of the First Baptist Church held its June meeting at the Church Thursday afternoon. Mrs. A. D. Garringer presided and conducted the preliminary exercises including the devotion. The topic was "Stewardship" from the study book New Africa, which produced an interesting discussion by the members. Ices and tea were served during the social hour.

nation's property and the nation's honor. We submit in no spirit of political flattery that it is a shocking thing that we have waited vainly for seven years for one word, one syllable, one whisper of the widest criticism of those crimes and criminals to come from a single representative of the administration.

"They heard La Follet's denunciation of Teapot Dome—and were silent. They saw the various processes in the alienation of the nation's property—and were silent. They heard the gospel of the capitalist that buzzed for weeks and months—and were silent. There was not a man among them with enough will power, or lung power, to blow a police whistle.

"Sometimes silence is golden—for the thief.

Why, he demanded, were the leaders of the administration silent, and he answered his own question thus:

"Because of the organization of the party men was a beneficiary of the crime.

"We need, he went on ironically, the erstwhile chairman of the national committee of the regime in power laying aside his duties as an elder in the church to sink in to the office of Sinclair to get the tainted bonds. We see him smiling about like a receiver of stolen goods to men of means to persuade them dishonestly to contribute these to the party fund under cover.

"We see him sending a portion of these bonds to the dictator of an administration, affectionately known as 'Andy,' and thus we know that the high functionaries of the state knew that the party was to be made a beneficiary of the crime.

"And thus the campaign debts of the regime in power have been paid by Harry Sinclair, and now with pious platitudes, it enters in to the office of Sinclair to get the tainted bonds. We see him smiling about like a receiver of stolen goods to men of means to persuade them dishonestly to contribute these to the party fund under cover.

lent. Save for a laudation of the Jeffersonian doctrine of state's rights, there was nothing in his epochal speech that referred even indirectly to this most controversial problem here at Houston.

His speech was a classic of attack, a masterpiece of invective and assault on the party in power, and with it always the fervent plea to Democrats not to quarrel, not to fight, but to unite against the common foe.

chairman and his first act was to make a forceful plea to the delegates not to repeat the great blunder at Madison Square Garden.

"United we can win," was the burden of his speech. It reflected the sober, contemplative judgment of a majority of the Democratic leaders who are determined here that there shall be no division over the only real controversy that be sets this convention—prohibition.

"The Democratic party is not a prohibition party," he asserted. "Neither is it an anti-prohibition party. Democrats have always divided on the question of prohibition."

In this situation, he declared, the sensible thing for the Democrats to do is to "demonstrate their willingness to enter into honorable compromises and to make personal sacrifices."

"Otherwise," he said, "the opportunity which is auspicious—the opportunity for victory—will be wasted."

Senator Robinson said in part: "The Democratic party has a mission which has not materially changed since the days of Jefferson. The necessity for political reform is greater now than ever before. Our party, from its birth, has safeguarded the rights of the masses. It has championed personal liberty and opposed centralization. Jefferson sought to protect the unselfish against the employment of laws and government agencies for private profit."

"Jackson aroused the public to the menace of plutocracy. Cleveland voiced resentment at the abuse of the taxing power to enrich favored groups by the exploitation of the masses. Wilson defined a new Democratic ideal of justice and equality."

"In this campaign the Republicans cunningly seek to raise false issues through which to win their way back into public favor."

"The national administration during the last seven years is indefensible from any standpoint. For corruption and inefficiency it is matched only by the disgraceful prostitution of power in states dominated by the Republican party. The assertion of our opponents that the Democratic party cannot be trusted to promote sound business is totally false. The Democratic party has as no time for the kind of local enterprises. It is the defender of legitimate business. What other period since our government was established compares favorably with the eight years of the Wilson administration?"

"The boldest champion of the opposition cannot recall another time when prosperity was more general; labor was profitably employed; industry full time; agriculture was on an equality with other businesses."

"The prosperity of the present by no means equals that under Democratic control."

"The acts on the whole do not justify the boast in the Kansas City platform."

"The secretary of the treasury admits in his annual report for 1927 that conditions during that year were worse than in 1926."

"The president's industrial conference board asserts that business prosperity in the United States is confined to giant corporations. The bureau of foreign and domestic commerce has estimated one hundred thousand concerns in 1927 and reported thirty-four thousand of them earning no profits whatever."

"The commissioner of internal revenue states that only three-fifths of the corporations manufacturing textiles have the same percentage of corporations manufacturing leather products reported net incomes for 1925."

"The record of commercial and bank failures reflects the 'falsity' of this claim of exceptional prosperity."

"In 1919, only fifty state banks and four national banks failed with aggregate liabilities of less than $12,000,000; in 1925 three hundred and sixty-one state banks and one hundred and three national banks with total liabilities of $175,000,000 failed in receivership. Note the figures for 1926: Seven hundred and seventy-two banks failed with liabilities of $266,000,000.

"What are the facts with respect to commercial failures? There were 29 per cent more in 1927 than in the previous year."

"Annual farm products decreased more than $1,500,000,000, comparing 1924 with 1927."

"The bureau of labor statistics reveal a 22 per cent decrease now in employment over 1927."

"The depressed condition of agriculture is of common knowledge. This, the greatest of all industries, has been steadily declining since the policy of deflation in 1921. Every one knows that agriculture has been going backward since Wilson's administrations ended. Never before has there existed such discontent among farm producers. They attribute their distressed condition to the policies of the Republican party. Why should farmers be compelled to sell their products in the open markets of the world and to buy from trusts and monopolies which arbitrarily fix the prices of their commodities?"

"They are ready, it afforded the opportunity, to safeguard their own interest through political action. The Republican party has betrayed the farmers of the United States and now seeks again to deceive them with new false promises. The only specific measure for farm relief pledged by the Kansas City platform is increased tariff duties which experience shows cannot be effective."

"The economic equality of agriculture with other industries may be promoted by reducing the tariff on manufactured articles consumed by farmers; by a system of export rebates; or by the adoption of the principle of the McNary-Haag bill. Such equality can never be established by merely raising the tariff on imports."

"The tariff which is grown in substantial surplus above domestic requirements."

"This convention should invite support from farmers by declaring adherence to these principles."

CHAPTER XIX

When her heavy blue eyes opened they rested on her mother, standing beside the bed with a tray.

"I didn't have the heart to wake you before, Stella. You were sleeping so soundly."

"What time is it?"

"The noon whistle just blew."

Stella sat up. "But mother, I saw your note, dear. But when the Age came, and we realized what you'd been through, we both thought you'd better sleep. You so we knew you weren't in then. It's pretty bad, those attacks. I don't know what we're coming to."

"It's awful," Stella sighed her coffee. "We stopped the presses. I wrote the piece in the Age." She had to think quickly.

"A man," called up, Stella. A little after eleven.

"A man?"

"He seemed anxious to get in touch with you. He—he wouldn't give his name. Boston call."

It was rather awkward. Mrs. Bagot moved about the room, raising curtains and putting things to rights. Stella sensed anxiety, and hesitant questions. She decided on activity as the best defense.

"I wonder if father could let me have the Ford."

"Why, I suppose so. But must you dash right out again, dear? Don't you think you'd better rest? Your father's been rather hoping for a chance to show you something of what he's been doing about the place. But he wouldn't say anything. You know how he is. Unless you showed interest. Anybody in and out of the room, ever on all this is going on. My place is right in it." She tried to smile reassuringly. She must appear mistress of herself. Above all, she must get away from the house.

"I can't, right now, dear. And she couldn't think here. And Ernest might call her again and tell in a way she couldn't meet with complicated evasions. "You see, Mother, the best way to work up the background for my article seemed to be to go right to work on the Age. So that's what I'm doing. I'll go over the place tomorrow. It will be nice to have a good visit with father. He's such a dear!"

The Theater

Any other time you could blame it on the hot weather. But if New York is experiencing the frigid weather that is Ohio's lot, the lack in enthusiastic response to the recent movie offerings on Broadway must be due to the films' inferiority.

"Fazil" with Greta Garbo and Charles Farrell is not making the reviewers go into ecstasies and is bolstered up by Joe Cook and Clark and McCullough in Movie-tone.

"Hands of Orlac" at the Greenwich Village Theater, despite a morbid plot, has won the most praise, for its artistic workmanship. It tells of a musician who has his hands cut off in a railroad wreck, and has grafted in their place a pair of the arms of a recently executed murderer, and the reaction forms the basis of the plot.

The Roxy has "Chicken ala King," with a hackneyed plot; the Capitol, "A Certain Young Man" with Ramon Novarro; the Cameo, "Shooting Stars," and Chester Conklin and W. C. Fields at the Paramount in "Fools for Luck."

The legitimate theaters have gone into their annual summer retirement and the night clubs are getting the most of the patronage.

HOME-COMING PROGRAM PLANS REVEALED AT BOOSTER DINNER

Elaborate plans for the entertainment of visitors and local residents during the four-day 1928 Greene County Home-Coming celebration, August 25-28, were disclosed at the Tuesday night "booster dinner" held at the home of Dr. A. C. Messinger, chairman of the program committee.

The morning of Sunday, August 25, will be devoted to services in every church with the sermon to be preached by a former Xenian who is now a minister in another city. In the afternoon Dr. W. A. Gallaway, chairman of the historical committee, will arrange to hold a community service, probably in Shawnee Park, showing a reproduction of the earliest pioneer church services of the county.

The Sunday evening program will also be a community affair with the principal address to be made by United States Senator S. D. Fess, Yellow Springs.

Monday has been designed as "High School and Lodge Day." All high school students, lodges and other organizations will participate in parades and other entertainment features. There are ten high school bands in the county and these musical organizations will compete for prizes.

"Greene County Day" will be celebrated Tuesday, August 28. A prominent part will be taken by the Xenia Retail Merchants' Association and all residents of the county. It is planned to make the observance more county-wide, if possible, than on any of the other days. William M. Jarline, Kansas, secretary of agriculture, may

AMAZING RELIEF OBTAINED BY USE OF NEW KONJOLA

This Lady Says Advanced Medicine Ended Every Trace Of Stomach Trouble

Thousands of men and women in Xenia have been relieved of many of the worst forms of stomach, liver, kidney and bowel miseries through the use of this celebrated new Konjola medicine, and thousands of others in this city are still suffering from these ailments, but every day more and more of these same sufferers are turning to Konjola for relief. Hundreds of statements have been published, many from this city, in which they tell how Konjola restored them to a new state of health. Just a few days ago Mrs. Irvin Huffman, R. F. D. No. 2, Xenia, made the following statement to the Konjola Man at the Gallaher Drug Store, this city, where he is explaining the merits of Konjola.

"I will personally recommend and endorse Konjola to anyone who is suffering," said Mrs. Huffman, "because this medicine completely ended every trace of the stomach trouble that I was suffering."

"My stomach was so disordered that every meal I ate caused me intense suffering. Every bite of food that I ate seemed to form a heavy lump in the pit of my stomach that made me very uncomfortable for several hours afterward. Terrible pains seemed to settle in my abdomen and quite often my entire body would be affected. I never knew what brought these attacks on but nothing ever helped to relieve them. I was also subject to belching spells which would rise into my throat leaving an unpleasant taste in my mouth. For days at a time I was in a weak, nervous condition that made it impossible to do my housework. Besides this misery my back ached all the time and whenever I stooped over I was certain to suffer agonies. This condition had been going on so long that I thought my case was hopeless."

"But it turned out that I was certainly mistaken when I thought nothing would help me. Because, just about this time I got hold of some Konjola and began taking it as directed. I had faith in this medicine right from the start because so many reliable persons had recommended it to me. The first thing I noticed was that my digestive organs were gradually getting stronger and that the food did not cause me the intense trouble it formerly did. So I tried eating things that I never dared touch before and you can imagine my surprise when they all came perfectly. That heavy lump in the pit of my stomach soon vanished and has never returned since I completed the treatment of this medicine. The awful pains do not bother me the least bit any more and I know that relief is permanent. Those spells of belching are ended and every other trace of stomach trouble is gone. My nerves are a great deal stronger and they do not bother me any more. In every way my health has improved and I know that it is all due to the wonderful power of this splendid Konjola medicine. Therefore I shall always highly endorse it to anyone who is in ill-health."

The Konjola Man is at the Gallaher Drug Store, Xenia, where he is daily meeting the public and introducing and explaining the merits of this remedy. Free samples given.

be obtained as the orator for the day.

A long auto parade will also be a feature. Isadore Hyman, president of the Downtown Country Club, is in charge of plans for a circus and barbecue at Cox Memorial Athletic Field. The county Granges and the Farm Bureau are co-operating in the program.

Wednesday, August 29, the final day of the celebration, will be known as "Patriotic Day." The principal feature under consideration is an aerial circus. An effort will be made to obtain airplanes from Wright Field and Senator Fess has promised to use his influence with Secretary of War Davis. Joseph P. Foody Post, American Legion, will have charge of the day's program, which will include parades, speeches and a program by military organizations including drills. Company L, 15th Infantry, Ohio National Guard, will also take an active part.

The American Legion plans to erect a flag pole on the south Court House lawn and dedicate this to Greene County. The D. A. R. may also dedicate a memorial.

DEATH CLAIMS MRS. C. C. STEPHENSON AT YELLOW SPRINGS

Mrs. Effie Stevens Stephenson, 65, wife of C. C. Stephenson, postmaster of Yellow Springs, died at her home in that village Tuesday afternoon at 1 o'clock. Death followed a lingering illness of several months from a complication of diseases.

Mrs. Stephenson was active both in political and social work and was a former member of the Greene County Central Committee. She was an active worker for Senator S. D. Fess during his last campaign.

She is a sister of W. D. Stevens, Sacramento, former governor of California. Mrs. Stephenson has resided in Yellow Springs a number of years.

She is survived by her husband and one son, Harry Stephenson, Springfield, one grandson, Philip Stephenson and one granddaughter, Martha Collins. The following brothers and sisters also survive: W. D. Stevens, Mrs. John K. Wilson, Mrs. Sue Reynolds, Mrs. Dwight Davis and Mrs. James Fogarty, all of California.

Funeral services will be held at the residence Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock with burial in Glen Forest Cemetery.

JAMES W. DAILEY IS SUDDENLY CALLED

James W. Dailey, 70, passed away Tuesday evening at 5:15 o'clock at his home in Clifton, following an illness of twenty-four hours. Death was caused by a sudden attack of heart trouble.

Mr. Dailey was a well known retired farmer, and resided in the village eleven years. He had lived in Clifton and vicinity forty-five years.

He leaves his widow, and five daughters: Mrs. Blanche Brooman, Mrs. Edna Cuttice, Mrs. Beattie Stretcher, Mrs. Marie Sparrow, Mrs. Mabel Hopping, all of Clifton.

Three sisters, Mrs. Anna Reed, Clifton and Mrs. Belle Brooman, and Mrs. Minerva Whalen, Springfield, also survive.

Mr. Dailey was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Clifton. Funeral services will be held at the church, at 2:30 Thursday with burial in Clifton Cemetery.

NAMED OHIO BELL CHIEF OF SAFETY

WILLIAM J. KOOGLER

The safety angle of telephone plant activities is going to be observed by the Ohio Bell Telephone Company in a more personal and practical way, according to information just received from the Ohio Bell division offices in Dayton by H. W. Cleaver, commercial manager of the Xenia exchange.

This policy was announced with the appointment of William J. Koogler as division plant safety supervisor. Mr. Koogler leaves the position of district plant superintendent in Springfield to make his headquarters in Dayton. His new duties will require him to make frequent visits to Xenia, as well as the rest of the southwestern portion of the state.

"We are going into the safety angle of telephone plant activities in a more personal and practical way," was the word received by Mr. Cleaver from J. H. Beilstein, division plant superintendent in Dayton.

GREENE COUNTY PART OF NEW BOY SCOUT COUNCIL BEING FORMED

Greene County is included in a new Boy Scout area council now in the process of formation.

With probable development of the Xenia district soon, Scouting is expected to be established here on a more definite basis than heretofore.

The new area council is known as the Tennessean Area Council and comprises Greene, Clinton, Clark, Logan and Champaign Counties.

Xenia is one of the districts in the Area as are the other county seats, including Wilmington, Springfield, Urbana and Bellefontaine.

Wilmington and Urbana have already been organized as districts and Xenia is expected to do likewise.

Xenia has always been affiliated with the Dayton Scout Council, but has never before had the advantage of a first-class, organized council.

offer.

Homer T. Gratz has been selected as field executive for the new Area and will have charge of development of the Xenia district. The new executive, accompanied by George F. Miller, representative of the national Scout council, with headquarters at Columbus for the district comprising Ohio, Kentucky and West Virginia, was in Xenia Tuesday to confer with local Scoutmasters over the new project.

It is pointed out that identification with an organized Scout council will mean much for Greene County in that a stabilized program will be arranged and every boy and girl will have an opportunity to become a Scout.

The new Scout executive will divide his time between the five counties under his jurisdiction and interest in the Scout movement is expected to be greatly stimulated.
